LONG LIST OF CASES IN SEPTEMBER COURT

Legal Grist Mill Kept Busy Grinding Out Verdicts.

AUMAN PAID THE COSTS

Grand Jury Ignored Bill in Which He Charged James Finkel, of Spring Mills, With Assault and Directed Prosecutor to Pay Costs.

Court convened on Monday morning at ten o'clock, and nearly the entire forenoon was taken up in hearing motions and petitions. The grand jury was called and sworn and Albert Smeltzer, a retired farmer, of Spring Township, selected as foreman, and after being charged by the Court as to the rights and duties of grand juries, they were placed in charge of two constables appointed by the Court and taken to the new grand jury room on the first floor of the remodeled Court House. H. K. Hoy, a retired farmer of Spring Township, was appointed assistant constable to wait upon the grand jury, which now requires two constables on account of the location of the grand jury room away from the Court Room.

The several constables of the County then made their quadrennial reports to the court and court adjourned at 11.20.

Monday afternoon court convened, case of W. H. Musser vs. Thomas Johnson, being an appeal, continued on account of illness of the defendent. The first case taken up was W. H. Musser vs. Irvin Bennett, an appeal from the decision of the Justice of the Peace, and brought to recover balance due on several insurance policies issued by the plaintiff's agency on saw mill property of the defendent in March, 1909. The defendant not having fully paid the premium, $90, the plaintiff settled with the companies, and sometime during the fall of 1909, after several demands on the defendant to pay these premiums the policies were canceled, the plaintiff alleging at the request of the defendant and also that the defendant had removed the mill from Glen Harris. The defendant alleged that he did not want these policies canceled and had asked for a permit, but that the plaintiff demanded $22 in addition to the amount already paid, being the amount due on the policies under the short rate rule. The defendent contended that he was not liable for this under the terms of the policies, but liable only for the pro rata of the term. He paid $10, leaving a balance due of $12.00, for which the suit was brought. Verdict in favor of the defendant.

Simon H. Sell, District Attorney of Bedford County, and Walter Welch, a member of the Clearfield County bar, were in attendance at court. The Treasurer of Centre County acknowledged treasurer's deeds to sundry persons for unseated land tracts sold at treasurer's sale.

Comm. vs. Brit. Mongan, charged with assault, etc. Prosecutor William T. Mayes. Case is from Spring Township and the defendant waived the finding of the grand jury and plead guilty.

Comm. vs. James Finkle, charged with assault and battery, prosecutor J. J Auman. The case is from Penn Township, and the grand jury ignored the bill and put the costs on the prosecutor, excepting the four dollars due the county.

Comm. vs. James Finley, charged with larceny, prosecutor Harry Dukeman, defendant waived the finding of the grand jury and plead guilty.

Comm. vs. Brit. Mongan, charged with larceny, prosecutor Richard Packer. Defendant waived the finding of the grand jury and plead guilty.

Comm. vs. William McCloskey; prosecutor Thomas McCartney. This case is from Snow Shoe Township, and the defendant was indicted on three separate counts, for furnishing medicine to one Catherine Watson, who was in delicate condition. At the close of the Commonwealth's testimony counsel for the defendant moved the Court to direct the jury to find a verdict of not guilty on the ground that the Comm. had not made out a case. After argument the Court quashed the first count, nolle prossed the second count and directed a verdict of not guilty on the third count, but submitted the case to the jury on the question of costs.

Verdict dividing the costs equally between the prosecutor and the defendant.

Comm. vs. Albert Kunes, prosecutor Charles Winslow, indicted for larceny from the person. This case is from Liberty Township, and from the testimony it would appear that on the 10th of

EVERYBODY WAITING FOR BIG FAIR NEXT WEEK

Great Event Will be Held On October, 4, 5, 6 and 7.

FINE RACING PROGRAM

Exhibits and Amusements Promise to be Best Ever—Children Admitted Free On Wednesday—Concerts by Bellefonte Band.

Everything is in readiness for the big Centre County fair, to be held on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week. A splendid program has been arranged, first class attractions secured and all that is needed to make the great event the best held in Centre County is fine weather. The Weather Man has promised to be good, so that it is expected to have a tremendous crowd in attendance on all four days.

The fair grounds have been put in tip top shape for next week and the race track will be found to be in prime condition, barring, of course, exceptionally heavy rains. The races scheduled will be of the highest class, some of the best horses on the eastern tracks being entered for the several events.

The display of stock, poultry, farm products, implements and machinery and also fancywork, etc., gives promise of excelling anything heretofore exhibited on the grounds. The fair managers have been working untiringly to have every detail attended to in advance so that the big crowd on hand will find nothing lacking for their entertainment and comfort.

Of course, the horse racing will be the big feature on Wednesday, Thursday and

BEEZER'S AUTO UPSET

Skidded on Muddy Roads at Pleasant Gap; Occupants Unhurt.

While Huston Goss was making a fast run from State College to Bellefonte, on Tuesday afternoon, to enable Will Tyson, to catch the last train to his home at Tyrone, George A. Beezer's new E. M. F. automobile skidded and upset near Pleasant Gap. Four occupants of the big touring car escaped unhurt, due to the fact that the strong top of the machine lodged against a fence post and prevented the automobile from turning turtle.

While it at first appeared that the car had been badly damaged, it turned out that but one of the rear wheels had been destroyed and the top and fenders bent and scraped. Otherwise the car was found to be all right. A wheel on Dr. Sebring's E. M. F. car was borrowed and placed on the Beezer machine and in this way it was easily brought to Bellefonte shortly after the accident happened.

The occupants of the car were Mr. Tyson, Huston Goss and his mother and Marie Montgomery. As a result of Tuesday's frequent showers, the roads were very muddy and dangerous. Near the old road to State College, at Pleasant Gap, the car suddenly skidded and before Mr. Goss could right matters the machine swung completely around and then turned over. It all happened so quickly that the occupants of the car were hardly able to realize what had happened or how narrowly they had escaped serious injury and possibly death.

LUTHERAN SYNOD MEETS

Ministers Representing Seven Counties in Session Here.

The annual meeting of the Central Pennsylvania Synod of the Lutheran church is in progress in Bellefonte, the opening session being held last night. The several sessions will be held in the Lutheran church and will continue until Sunday evening. On Sunday the pulpits of the several churches in Bellefonte will be filled by visiting Lutheran ministers. From 75 to 80 visiting ministers are in town for the meeting.

At last night's session the synod sermon was preached by Rev. J. M. Rearick, of Salona. This was followed by the synodical communion. Beginning with today three sessions will be held each day. Today's program calls for the organization of the synod, the enrolling of delegates, hearing of reports from the various charges, after which there will be addresses by secretaries of the church, at-large. Tonight the session will be devoted chiefly to a discussion of "Church Brotherhoods", a new feature with the Lutheran church Tomorrow night there will be a discussion of foreign missions, the principal address to be by Rev. L. D. Wolfe, missionary to India. On Saturday evening the subject of discussion will be "The Bible." An interesting feature of the service in the Lutheran church on Sunday evening will be the ordination of ministers.

Seeing Ourselves As Others See Us

Ira D. Garman, a former resident of Bellefonte and now a prosperous business man in Philadelphia, gives some suggestions to Bellefonte merchants in this issue of "The Republican" which are well worth the earnest consideration of every business man in this town. "Dick" Garman is engaged in the jewelry business in Philadelphia. He is president of the Pennsylvania Retail Jewelers' Association. He has had wide opportunities to study business conditions, both in the larger cities and the small towns. From actual experience and close observation he knows whereof he speaks.

Everybody who knows "Dick" Garman knows of his never-failing interest in Bellefonte. No former Bellefonte boy visits his old home town more frequently than does he. So deeply is he interested in Bellefonte that it would not surprise us in the least were he to some day establish a home here and spend a part of each year amid his boyhood scenes.

Mr. Garman happened to be in Bellefonte a day or two following the publication in "The Republican" of an article which was written by the editor as a friendly talk with Bellefonte merchants. In this we pointed out the need of something being done to win back to Bellefonte the large country trade that in more recent years has drifted to the small town stores and the mail order houses of the cities. Mr. Garman is a regular reader of "The Republican." He had read the article in question. We asked him, on his return to Philadelphia, to write "The Republican" a letter, which would candidly express his views on the subject. He consented and we publish his letter, as follows:

PHILADELPHIA, SEPT. 23, 1910.

MR. CHAS. E. DORWORTH,
Editor Bellefonte Republican,

DEAR SIR:—

Having been asked by you to write a letter for "The Republican" on "Bellefonte and its needs," I have decided to do so.

It is not my purpose to criticise or condemn your citizens in any way to suggest a few thoughts by one interested in the town, while living away, the same as if I were there continually. Your editorial to the merchants some few weeks ago contained some very excellent advice to them in regard to Bellefonte's needs, past and present. There is no doubt that trade has drifted away some and and the time is now ripe for some suggestions and ways to get it back.

In travelling through some of the Middle Western States and Canada the past summer, in observing and listening to the merchants of the different cities in their ways of doing business, I found the most successful places were the ones that were up and doing by talking and booming their cities continually. I found many of the cities have an active Board of Trade and Merchants Association with a live President and hard working Secretary; when they meet they not only talk, but give their money for the purpose of having different Conventions meet in their city and give inducements for manufacturers to locate in their vicinity. We hear so much in small towns of their trade going to the city stores and mail order houses. Now what are they doing to counteract this? And if this is so, why do they not advertise in their home paper and tell the customers the same as the mail order house and point out to them the advantages of buying at home and prove to them that it is much to their advantage to deal with their own merchants. Many of the advertisements which attract people to the city to buy are misleading and not the bargains they are represented to be. You should never buy from mail order houses, by all means buy at home and help those who help you. In this way you will see and know what you are buying.

Bellefonte's advantages are most wonderful, having the finest spring of clear water in the country, electric lights, telephone and steam heat plants and the best of hotels to be found in the state, newspapers not to be equaled anywhere, good up-to-date stores, fine public buildings, first class banks, numerous factories and lime stone quaries, beautiful farms, good railroad facilities and the finest schools and educational buildings in the state; a book could be written here of the fine schools and colleges in Centre County, the foremost topic in every city and town of the world. And just here I would like to congratulate your School Board on the magnificent new school building and also the architect, Mr. Robt. Cole, for the beautiful plans. Any community that could furnish the Governors for their state that Bellefonte has would be glory enough in itself for one town. No town probably in the country has suffered more than Bellefonte from adverse criticism, and the merchants should now see the advantage of pulling together and trying to build up what a few have been tearing down for years. Bellefonte has many advantages which the ordinary citizen does not realize. I would advise the catering for summer visitors, as well as Conventions; strangers spend lots of money. Again I would say "advertise;" talk Bellefonte and then your town will grow and prosper as you deserve to see and have it.

Yours very truly,

IRA D. GARMAN.

TWO ORCHARD MEETINGS

Interesting Sessions Held for Centre County Fruit Growers.

Two interesting orchard meetings, under the supervision of Agent T. C. Foster, of the State Division of Zoology, were held in Centre County last week. One was held in the orchard of Benjamin Limbert, near Madisonburg, and the other at the fruit farm of Col. W. Fred Reynolds, near Bellefonte.

The purpose of these meetings was to show the benefits arising from the better care of the trees along the line of pruning, spraying, fertilization and cultivation; in short, modern orchard methods practically applied. It was not a difficult matter to show that the work of the year had been of a successful character, for where conditions allowed of no doubt, the fruit clearly showed an exceptionally large percentage of perfect specimens.

Anthony W. Gardner Dead.

Anthony Wayne Gardner died at 3 o'clock this (Thursday) morning, at his late home, at Howard. Death was caused by general debility. Deceased was aged 83 years Surviving are a widow, two sons and three daughters. The funeral will be held, probably on Saturday, with interment at Eagleville.

Wreck on Bellefonte Central.

Four freight cars on the Bellefonte Central Railroad were derailed at Hunters Park on Tuesday. Traffic was suspended for the greater part of Wednesday.

YOUNG WIFE'S DEATH

Mrs. Waldo Homan Passes Away in Four-Weeks-Old Home, at Oak Hall.

Just happily located in her new home, which she had helped arrange and into which she and her husband moved four short weeks ago Mrs. Waldo Homan died at Oak Hall, on Saturday, last. Funeral services were held on Monday, burial being made at Pine Hall. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Stonecypher and Rev. Mr. Shultz, the latter of Pine Grove Mills and the young woman's pastor.

Mrs. Homan was formerly Miss May Krebs, daughter of David Krebs, of Pine Grove Mills. An accomplished young woman and ever radiating sunshine and happiness in the circle in which she moved, she was exceedingly popular with a host of friends. She was married to Mr. Homan not quite one year ago. During the last few months they had planned establishing a little home of their own and four weeks ago they started housekeeping. The news of her sudden death was a shock to her friends. Mrs. Homan was 18 years old.

A Good Move.

A uniform iron pipe hitching post, running the full length in front of Sheffer's grocery store and another extending along the entire front of Crider's Exchange, is being erected. This is a good move Let some others follow suit.

Mrs. Sarah Geiss Dead.

Mrs. Sarah Geiss died at 7 o'clock last night, at her late home at Centre Hall. Deceased was aged 67 years. She was the mother of Wagner Geiss, of Bellefonte. Funeral services at Centre Hall, on Saturday, at 10 o'clock.

JENKIN R. DAVID DIES AT SNOW SHOE HOME

His Death Mourned by Large Circle of Admiring Friends.

WAS COAL OPERATOR

Located in Snow Shoe 22 Years ago—During Greater Part of His Lifetime Was Affiliated With Lehigh Valley Coal Company.

Death claimed a good man and Snow Shoe lost one of its best and foremost citizens when, at 11 o'clock, on Thursday night, last, Jenkin R. David passed away at his home at that place. His death was due to a complication of diseases and while it was realized that his recovery was extremely doubtful the news that he had passed away was received with profound sorrow and regret by a wide circle of warm and admiring friends,

Funeral services were held on Sunday afternoon, interment being made in the Moshannon cemetery. A terrific rain storm swept over that section of the county when the funeral cortege arrived at the cemetery and it was impossible for members of the bereaved family and sorrowing friends to leave the carriages. The services were conducted by the Bellefonte Lodge of Elks and also the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of which lodges Mr. David was an active and valued member.

Jenkin David was one of those men whom other men are glad to know and regard as friends. His entire life was typical of the principle of fair dealing and with the passing of the years he endeared himself to a host of friends and stamped his individuality upon the community in which he lived. For a number of years Mr. David was a resident of Snow Shoe borough and actively and extensively identified with business interests and local affairs. In all that pertained to the good of his friends and the welfare of his own home town, he was untiringly and unselfishly active, ever striving to cast sunshine and happiness into the hearts and lives of others, especially those not so fortunate in their efforts to win success.

Born in Coben, Wales, on May 24, 1866, Jenkin David was the son of Thomas and Anna David. He came to America in 1883 and entered the employ of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, with which company he maintained more or less intimate affiliation during the remainder of his life. At the time of the big explosion at Pocohontas, W. Va., Jenkin David volunteered and served as one of the rescuing party, his splendid courage standing out conspicuously in the noble work of trying to save human life. He subsequently removed to Wilkes-Barre, where he entered and graduated from the Wilkes-Barre Business College. He then became a clerk for the Lehigh Valley Coal Company and for a time was located at Wilkes-Barre for that company. About 22 years ago he removed to Snow Shoe for the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, continuing with that corporation until two years ago, when he became identified with the Clarence Coal Company, the other owners being David Chambers and James Uzzle. He was connected with this company until about three months ago, when he retired and again engaged in the coal business for himself. Some time ago his health failed and he became quite ill, his condition being such as to occasion alarm among his friends. A complication of diseases gradually sapped his strength and on Thursday night, last, he closed his eyes in restful sleep.

Surviving are a widow, two daughters, Anna J. and Vivian, and one son, Jenkin, Jr. Four sisters, all residing in Wales, also survive, in addition to a cousin, Anna J. Rees, of Pittsburg, who is a trained nurse and who was at Mr. David's bedside at the time of his death.

Mr. David was an active member of the Presbyterian church. He held numerous local positions having to do with the good of the community and at the time of his death was a member of the Snow Shoe borough school board.

LOCK JAW KILLS BOY STRUCK BY GARDEN RAKE

RESULT OF ACCIDENT

Injured on Knee by Companion While at Play About Two Weeks Ago—Thought Nothing of Accident Until Blood Poisoning Developed.

Especially sad and distressing was the death, at 10.30 o'clock, on Sunday night, last, of Theodore Haupt, Jr., 15 years old, who died from blood poisoning, causing lock jaw, at the home of his father, Theodore Haupt, at Roopsburg. An accident while the boy and several companions were at play about two weeks ago, and which for some time appeared to be harmless, resulted in the development of blood poisoning. On Friday, last, his jaws became stiff and on Saturday they were locked. On Sunday, last, his jaws relaxed somewhat, but the blood poisoning had advanced beyond the power of the attending physicians and on Sunday night the boy passed away.

About two weeks ago young Haupt and several other boys were playing in the yard of his father's home. One of the boys accidentally struck him on the knee with a garden rake. The flesh was broken by one of the tines on the rake. The injury appeared to be of slight consequence and after a day or two young Haupt thought nothing of it. He was up and about as usual and apparently was in the best of health.

Last week, however, he developed a high temperature and a physician was called in. By this time, however, the blood poisoning had spread through the boy's system, reaching such a stage on Friday as to effect his jaws. All that medical skill and loving parents could do to ease the young man's suffering proved unavailing and on Sunday night he breathed his last.

WOMAN BURNED TO DEATH

Mrs. Fred Snyder, of Vail, Poured Coal Oil into Cook Stove.

While trying to build a fire in the cook stove at her home, at Vail, Mrs. Fred Snyder poured coal oil onto some burning paper, causing a terrific explosion and sustaining injuries which resulted in her death. The distressing accident happened on Sunday afternoon and although frightfully injured, Mrs. Snyder lingered until Tuesday, when she died. The woman's body was burned from head to foot. Surviving are a husband and nine children.

Mrs. Snyder had made one unsuccessful attempt to start the fire, applying a match to some paper and wood in the stove. The fire apparently had died out and in her effort to start it again and prepare dinner, Mrs. Snyder picked up a can and poured a quantity of the oil into the stove. Instantly there was a terrible explosion, a mass of flame shooting out from the stove and enveloping the unfortunate woman. Her body was covered with burning oil and before she could realize what had happened the fire reached the oil can, resulting in a second explosion. With her clothing a mass of flames and shrieking in agony, Mrs. Snyder rushed out into the yard. A son, Harry, ran to her aid and with blankets and carpets succeeded in extinguishing the flames, but not until the woman's body was so badly burned that pieces of flesh clung to her charred clothing.

Mrs. L. C. Bullock, of Milesburg, was in the office of Dr. Thomas Tobin, at Tyrone, when the latter was summoned. He drove rapidly to the Snyder home, where he found Mrs. Snyder still alive and conscious, but suffering untold misery. She remained conscious for some hours, but her injuries were such that all efforts to save her life were futile.

Rummage Sale Nets Over $500.

The rummage sale, for the benefit of the Bellefonte hospital, is doing the biggest business in the town. The proceeds up to last night amounted to $511.74. The sale will be continued until Saturday night, by which time the ladies having it in charge expect the proceeds will reach the $1,000 mark.

Woman's Club Meeting.

A meeting of the Woman's Club will be held on Saturday, October 8, at 3.30 o'clock, in Petrikin Hall. The meeting was originally scheduled for Friday, October 7.

Mothers' Meeting.

A Mothers Meeting will be held tomorrow (Friday) afternoon, at 3.30 o'clock, in Petrikin Hall. All women are cordially invited to attend.

CHEER TENER IN TOUR OF TRIUMPH

Thousands Greet Republican Nominee For Governor.

MEETS ISSUES SQUARELY

Frank and Manly Statements Command the Respect and Confidence o the People.

As John Kinley Tener, nominee for governor of the Republican party, continues on his tour of Pennsylvania, meeting the people face to face, grasping them by the hand and looking every man squarely in the eye and not afraid to meet any issue or question that may be raised, he is growing in popularity in every direction. The more the voters see of him the better they like him, and upon every hand he is being commended for the frankness and candor with which he is discussing the needs of the commonwealth, the policies of the Republican party and his personal aims and ambitions to insure an administration that will command the confidence and the admiration of all of the citizens of the state.

Mr. Tener and his colleagues on the Republican ticket, John M. Reynolds, Henry Houck and Charles F. Wright, nominees for lieutenant governor, secretary of internal affairs and state treasurer respectively, are enthusiastic over the receptions that have been accorded them in every county they have visited. Their meetings in the anthracite coal regions were especially well attended and afforded Mr. Tener an opportunity to demonstrate his keen interest in the wage-earners. His experiences as a lad employed in a steel mill in the great Pittsburg region may in a measure explain his keen interest in the toilers of the state.

In commenting upon Pennsylvania conditions, Mr. Tener a few days ago said:

Protecting Wage-Earners.

"The Republican party of Pennsylvania has to its credit a long history of legislation for the benefit of the people and the honor of the commonwealth.

"Their laws have been enacted for the protection of the working people, most of which were placed upon the statute books at the request and with the advice of the organized workmen. Of this record we are justly proud, and we point to our action in the past as a guarantee of our intentions in the future. We recognize the fact that the development of our industries has brought with it new problems, new dangers, and altogether complex conditions that demand and deserve consideration and treatment by the law making and law administrating powers of our commonwealth.

For Safety Appliances.

"Among the many subjects affecting the wage-earners which it will be our duty to consider in the future none is more important than the enactment of laws for the protection of the life, health and safety of the men and women who are engaged in industrial pursuits. The first requisite of a progressive community must be the safety and security of these people who are least able to protect themselves, and the prevention of industrial acc.... is a problem that must appeal to all patriotic citizens of the commonwealth.

"In connection with this question, mine and factory inspection has been developed steadily in the state of Pennsylvania, and many laws have been enacted requiring employers to safeguard the lives and the health of the wage-earners. Further legislation upon this subject will be enacted just as fast as experience points out the necessity therefor.

Responsibility of Employer.

"Closely related to the subject of industrial accidents and their prevention is the question of compensating workmen for losses by such accidents. The Republican party of Pennsylvania is responsible for the enactment of an employers' liability law, the provisions of which afford to workmen the opportunity of securing damages in many cases where they would not have the right to sue under the laws of many states.

"However it is a regretable fact that under any system of liability the workmen must engage in long and costly litigation, and that the waste of money by workmen and employers in prosecuting and defending suits of this character would go a long way if paid immediately to the injured workman, to relieve him in his distress.

Pennsylvania Should Lead.

"We believe that the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, the greatest of all industrial states should be among the first to put in operation advanced legislation in respect to this subject, and as a measure to that end it will be our purpose to recommend the appointment of a commission of representative workmen and employers, whose duty it shall be to investigate every phase of the question and recommend to the legislature a bill in accordance with the result of their investigation."

A WONDERFUL MUSEUM

Centre County Should be Represented in State Museum at Harrisburg.

There is an institution of the state that has been established exclusively for the public, and for the benefit of every citizen in the commonwealth. It is the State Museum at Harrisburg, where a collection is being made of every kind of mineral, animal, bird, insect, flower, specimen of tree, and historical relic from each county of the state.

Centre County should be well represented in this institution, which is laying a foundation invaluable for future years. The purpose of the various divisions of the museum is as follows:

Division of Zoology.—Where can be seen the animals in their respective haunts and natural surroundings; many valuable features for the agriculturalist, where information may be obtained in reference to the birds, insects and animals of the locality that are helpful or destructive to crops.

Division of Geology.—Since Pennsylvania is rich in minerals, there should be placed before the people of the commonwealth one of the best state mineral exhibits found in the Union. This should include mineralogy, paleontology and industrial geology. Each county in the state should be well represented by its respective minerals, the coals, iron, oils, clays, glass sands, building stones, etc., with maps and charts showing where located. The educational and industrial should be closely allied to be of use to the commonwealth. There should be maps, charts and fossils of the geological era, portraying the earliest formation known, including the glacial period, upheavals, mountain and valley making, rivers and lakes of the state, with relief maps and models showing strata formations, etc.

Division of Botany—with specimens helpful in learning the different species of trees, their uses and their woods; the care of forest preserves, as well as the flowers and plants used for beautifying or for their chemical and medicinal qualities. Many fossil plants of the coal fields of Pennsylvania are on exhibition at the Museum. With the realization of the Capitol Park extension, it would be pleasing to see every tree, shrub and flower native in the state planted and labeled, as far as practicable, within its grounds.

Division of Archaeology.—Pennsylvania should be well known by a collection from the contents of the mounds that have been unearthed, which tells of an early people inhabiting the state, antedating the American Indian. These implements of history, arts and crafts should be gathered at the Museum, that our present and future generations could have a more definite knowledge of these early peoples. Following this, the American Indian collection should be arranged and preserved. There are several good collections in the state, now obtainable, and in a few years these may be scattered and lost. They should be arranged to show their manner of living; arts and crafts in war and peace; monuments; implements; inscriptions; relics; dwellings; clothing and food obtained from their surroundings, each properly shown in its relation to the other. Maps of their paths over the state; origin and meaning of the many Indian names of cities and towns, rivers, etc., throughout the state. Then follow with the customs and arts of the early European settlers and the implements of their arts, crafts, etc. This influence was the nucleus around which the moulding of our early history of the state was formed. The early publications, German pie plates, and the hand printing should also be shown.

There are historic relics of war and peace in which the state is rich. Many good collections are scattered throughout the state, and should find a home in the Museum. There are also many unmarked historical spots in each county of the state which should not be neglected. Either the state or historical society of each county, should see that these are authentically and intelligently labeled, even if only with a small bronze tablet on a boulder, so that they may not be lost to posterity.

Useful and Fine Arts.—Pennsylvania from its earliest times has produced articles from the looms, print shops and the forge. The Museum wishes to make a fine collection of the articles, including those of exquisite make of the present day. These will include printing, book-binding and photography; Textiles in cotton, wool, silk and linen; pottery, glass terra cotta, bronze, leather and wood. All of these articles to be of Pennsylvania make only.

There are many persons in Centre County having relics pertaining to Pennsylvania, which they wish to preserve for posterity; there is no more fitting place to preserve and display these to the public than at the State Museum at Harrisburg, where they will be well cared for and displayed. The Museum will be glad to receive any such material, either permanently or as a loan, in the following subjects; flora, fauna, minerals, geology, archaeology, arts and history. These should be well labeled, with the name of the specimen, location or any brief historical incident connected with it; the name and address of the donor should also accompany it.

Address, State Museum, Harrisburg, Pa.

Some Fancy Breads.

Miss Fannie Merritt Farmer is a firm believer in good, wholesome, old-fashioned bread, made in the right way. But she thinks it is well to have a variety even in this staple article of diet, and so her latest demonstration in her School of Cookery was on some fancy forms of bread.

The first she called Forest Hall corn sticks. To make them, Miss Farmer sifted together one cupful of corn meal, three-quarters cupful of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one-half teaspoonful of salt; then added one-half cupful of hot boiled hominy grist, to which was added one-third cupful of butter, one cupful of milk and one egg well beaten. These were baked in buttered stick pans.

Cream fingers were compounded as follows: Scald one-half cupful of heavy cream, and add two tablespoonfuls of sugar and salt. When lukewarm, add one yeast cake dissolved in water and one and one-half cupfuls of flour. Knead, rise, roll out and shape with lady-finger cutter. Again let rise, and bake, and glaze with milk mixed with sugar.

This is the rule for quick nut loaf: Mix and sift two cupfuls of bread flour, one-half cupful of sugar, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, and work in three tablespoonfuls of butter and two tablespoonfuls of lard; then add one egg and one egg-yolk well beaten, one cupful of milk and one-half cupful of walnuts cut in pieces. Beat well, put in buttered bread-pan, let stand twenty minutes; then bake in a moderate oven.

For coffee rolls: Add two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one-quarter teaspoonful of salt to one-half cupful of scalded milk; when lukewarm, add one-half yeast cake dissolved in lukewarm water and three-quarter cupful of flour. Cover and let rise; then add four tablespoonfuls of melted butter, one egg well beaten, a few gratings from lemon rind, and enough flour to knead. Again let rise, roll in long rectangular pieces one-quarter inch thick, spread with softened butter, and fold to make three layers. Cut off pieces three-quarters inch wide, cover and let rise. Take each piece separately and twist from ends in opposite directions, coil and bring ends together at top of roll. Let rise in pans and bake twenty minutes in a moderate oven. Cool and brush over with confectioner's sugar moistened with enough boiling water to spread, and flavor with vanilla.

Honey bread is delicious. To make it, dissolve one yeast cake in one cupful of scalded milk; then add one-quarter pound butter, sugar, salt and one egg well beaten; then three cupfuls of flour, and beat two minutes. Add flour to knead (about one cupful), and let rise. Again knead, roll to one-half inch in thickness, spread with honey mixture, roll, let rise, and bake in a moderate oven.

The honey mixture is made by mixing one-half pound walnut meats finely chopped, one-quarter pound raisins seeded and cut in small pieces, and one cupful of honey.

Miss Farmer's rule for tea cakes is like this: To one cupful of scalded milk, add four tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one teaspoonful of salt, when lukewarm, add one yeast cake dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of milk, one egg and three cupfuls of flour. Cover and let rise until double in bulk; cut down and fill buttered muffin tins two-thirds full. Let rise, and bake in a moderate oven.—Boston Transcript.

Beauty of Woman.

Womanly beauty is about as rare as birds with four legs, according to an Italian of wealth and title, who has just published some interesting statistics in La Roma. According to this Italian statistician, among the French only one woman in every 2500 has any claim to beauty; his own race yields a possible one in every 2200; Spanish women of beauty come in the same proportion. The German woman he refuses to consider beautiful at all. England, he says, has the greatest number of beauties of any one nation of unmixed blood, the percentage being one in every 1200. This conservative Italian critic refuses to consider Americans as a race, because, he says, they are too polyglot. Considering the one city of New York, however, he finds there are more beauties than in any foreign city—about one in every 1200. And by "beauties," he says, he does not mean perfect "beauties," by any means. He means merely those with a few good features and no eccentricity to mar them. The cruelty of this Italian gentleman, whose only distinction has been gained by his present statistics, seems at first glance to be wholly un-Christian. A best, he can only pick out the women who are beautiful according to his own standards. We are sure that there are no women who are not deemed beautiful by somebody or other therefore, all must be beautiful. One man's opinion is a good as another's. Thinking the matter over carefully, however, one may find considerable logic in the Italian's remark, with regard to one beautiful woman in every 1200 in New York. How could the percentage be higher, when Washington has cornered the market?—Washington Post.

Disease of Chestnut Trees.

Within the past few years an entirely new disease of the common chestnut tree has appeared. It is evidently spreading in all directions from the neighborhood of New York City, where it was first observed. On Long Island, Southern Connecticut and Northern New Jersey it has proved so virulent that nearly all the chestnut trees are affected, and many of them have already died.

In Pennsylvania it is quite abundant throughout the eastern counties, but in the central and western portions of the state it is still either lacking or but sparingly distributed. Like all other plant diseases it doubtless has its limitations and it is not likely that it will thrive in all sections where the chestnut tree grows. It is not unlikely that it may have already nearly reached the limit of its extension.

However, that may be, it is well worth the attention of all who have chestnut trees or timber. A strong effort should be made to arrest the progress of the disease so soon as it appears. This is not specially difficult; and now, before the leaves fall, is the time to do it. When a tree is attacked and becomes infected the fungus rapidly spreads in the bark and growing wood of twigs and branches. It progresses so fast that these parts in larger or smaller patches are soon disorganized, killed and somewhat shrunken. The leaves which depend upon these parts for their water and food suppiy wither and shrivel, but do not fall. These twigs or branches with their attached dead leaves are very plainly seen in contrast with the natural ones and mark the presence of this particular disease. Of course, branches may die from other causes, particularly attacks of boring insects, and mechanical breakage, but the difference is not difficult to detect.

If during the next six weeks a careful examination is made for this disease, particularly west of the Susquehanna, and in sections not yet known to be infected, it is probable that it can be arrested or even entirely prevented.

Affected limbs should be cut off well below the dead wood and burned. Any trees, the trunks of which are diseased, should be cut down and the the bark and branches burned. The wood could be used for any purpose desired; it will not spread the disease.

While the State Forestry Department is personally directing work of this kind it behooves every individual to exert himself immediately, and cooperate for the common good. Within the sections named complete control or destruction of this chestnut disease seem assured if proper effort is made.

Winter Signs.

Evidences of an early fall and a cold winter are accumulating. And all this without reference to the prediction that a cold wave has been scheduled by the Weather Bureau.

Have you heard the katydid sing? Well, the katydids are singing in Kansas City and that song is the faithful harbinger of frost. It is the advance agent of the first sign of winter, and, unless all signs fall in hot weather, just six weeks will pass into history before the newspaper reporters will subscribe to the fact that "the first frost of the season fell here last night."

But the katydid is not the only witness. Did you ever see such hazy August evenings? You don't remember, of course. Ask any old-timer and he will tell you that you never did unless you saw frost in September following. Out in the country they say the roosters are crowing before the farmhouse doors. Always a warning that it is time to cut the winter's wood.

The leaves still persist in staying on the trees, but that usually reliable sign of an early fall is not to be accepted as controverting the katydid, the hazy evenings and the crowing rooster. The leaves sometimes fall to get the right "hunch" as to what is certain to happen.

And as to a severe winter? The corn husks are growing thick upon the ears, therefore it is almost certain that the goosebone will be the proper thickness when it is time to call the goosebone as a witness to confirm the other weather prophets in their mute attestations to the fact that the coming winter will be a "stinger."—Kansas City Times.

A Reliable Medicine—Not a Narcotic.

Mrs. F. Marti, St Joe, Mich., says Foley's Honey and Tar saved her little boys's life. She writes: "Our little boy contracted a severe bronchial trouble and as the doctor's medicine did not cure him, I gave him Foley's Honey and Tar in which I have great faith. It cured the cough as well as the choking and gagging spells, and he got well in a short time. Foley's Honey and Tar has many times saved us much trouble and we are never without it in the house." WRATH OF THE ROSES

An Old-World Legend With a Certain Degree of Barbaric Truth.

The position of the rose among the flowers is like that of the dog among animals. It is not so much that both are domesticated as that we have some dim feeling that they were always domesticated, says a writer in the London News. There are wild roses and there are wild dogs; I do not know the wild dogs; the wild roses are very nice. But nobody ever thinks of either of them if the name is abruptly mentioned in a gossip or a poem. On the other hand there are tame tigers and tame cobras, but if one says "I have a cobra in my pocket," or "There is a tiger in the music room," the adjective "tame" has to be somewhat hastily added. If one speaks of beasts one thinks first of wild beasts; if of flowers one thinks first of wild flowers.

But there are two great exceptions; caught so completely into the wheel of man's civilization, entangled so unalterably with his ancient emotions and images that the artificial product seems more natural than the natural. The dog is not a part of natural history; and the real rose grows in a garden. All must regard the elephaut as something tremendous, but tamed; and many, especially in our great cultured centers, regard every bull as presumably a mad bull. In the same way we think of most garden trees and plants as fierce creatures of the forest or morass taught at last to endure the curb.

But with the dog and the rose this instinctive principle is reversed. With them we think of the artificial as the archetype; the earthborn as the erratic exception. We think vaguely of the wild dog as if it had run away, like the stray cat. And we cannot help fancying that the wonderful wild rose of our hedges has escaped by jumping over the hedge. Perhaps they fled together, the dog and the rose; a singular and on the whole an imprudent elopement. Perhaps the treacherous dog crept from the kennel, and the rebellious rose from the flower bed, and they fought their way out in company, one with teeth and the other with thorns. Possibly this is why my dog becomes a wild dog when he sees roses and kicks them anywhere. Possibly this is why the wild rose is called a dog rose. Possibly not.

But there is this degree of dim barbaric truth in the quaint old world legend that I have just invented. That in these two cases the civilized product is felt to be the fiercer, nay even the wilder. Nobody seems to be afraid of a wild dog; he is classed among the jackals and the servile beasts. The terrible cave canem is written over man's creation. When we read, "Beware of the Dog," it means beware of tame dog, for it is the tame dog that is terrible. He is terrible in proportion as he is tame; it is his loyalty and his virtues that are awful to the stranger within your gates; still more to the stranger half way over your gates. He is alarmed at such deafening and furious ferocity; he flees from that great monster of mildness.

Well, I have much the same feeling when I look at the roses banked red and thick and resolute round a garden, they seem to me bold and even blustering. I hasten to say that I know even less about my own garden than anybody else's garden. I know nothing about roses, not even their names, I know only the name rose, and Rose is (in every sense of the word) a Christian name. It is Christian in the one absolute and primordial sense of Christian—that it comes down from the age of pagans. The rose can be seen and even smelled in Greek, Latin, Provencal, Gothic, Renaissance and Puritan poems. Beyond this mere word Rose, which (like wine and other noble words) is the same in all the tongues of white men, I know literally nothing.

I have heard the more evident and advertised names. I know there is a flower which calls itself the Glory of Dijon—which I had supposed to be its cathedral. But anyhow to have produced a rose and a cathedral is to have produced not only two very glorious and humane things, but also (as I maintain) two very soldierly and defiant things. I also know there is a rose called Marechal Niel—note once more the military ring.

And when I was walking round my garden the other day I spoke to my gardener (an enterprise of not little valor) and asked him the name of a strange dark rose that had somehow oddly taken my fancy. It was almost as if it reminded me of some turbid element in history and the soul. Its red was not only swarthy but smoky; there was something congested and wrathful about its color. It was at once theatrical and sulky. The gardener told me it was called Victor Hugo.

Therefore it is that I feel all roses to have some secret power about them; even their names may mean something in connection with themselves, in which they differ from nearly all the sons of men. But the rose itself is royal and dangerous; long as it has remained in the rich house of civilization it has never laid off its armor. A rose always looks like a mediaeval gentleman of Italy, with a cloak of crimson and a sword, for the thorn is the sword of the rose.

And there is this real moral in the matter—that we have to remember that civilization as it goes on ought to grow more ready to fight. The more valuable and reposeful is the order we have to guard the more vivid should be our ultimate sense of vigilance and potential violence. And when I walk round a summer garden I can understand how those high mad lords at the end of the Middle Ages, just before their swords clashed, caught at roses for their instinctive emblems of empire and rivalry. For to me any such garden is full of the wars of the roses.

SOUND WARNING TO WAGE EARNERS

What Democratic Victory Would Mean to Pennsylvanians.

VAST INTERESTS AT STAKE

Prosperity Under Protection and Distress and Free Soup Houses Under Cleveland Regime.

A boastful and blatant Democracy throughout the country is not only declaring that the next house of congress will be Democratic, but is predicting that the successor to President Taft will be a Democrat.

Late election returns have unquestionably given the Democrats great encouragement, and reports from certain states until recently reliably Republican put the result in November in doubt. Thoughtful men, while dreading the outcome, are at a loss to understand how the great American people could return to power a party which has caused so much misfortune and distress, both to the business interests and the wage-earners of the Union.

It has only been within the last few weeks that the citizens of Pennsylvania have apparently begun to realize the serious nature of the situation, and there are evidences upon every hand that the voters of the Keystone State will not be carried away with the tide of heresy and fanaticism that is sweeping over the country.

Warnings are going out in every direction that Pennsylvania must stand firm; that this bulwark of Republicanism must remain unshaken and that every vote must be polled, so that the election returns shall sound a trumpet blast to the world that the sane and sober citizenship of the Keystone State has rallied again around the banner of true Republicanism and protection.

Pennsylvania as the foremost industrial state has more at stake than any other commonwealth, and her vast army of wage-earners, the workers in the mills and the mines, realize the interest each and every one of them has in a continuance of Republican domination of the affairs of the state and the nation.

A Pennsylvania Tariff.

The tariff is more of a vital issue today than it has been at any time in the last decade.

The tariff act recently framed and now in force were drafted with particular reference to the fostering of Pennsylvania interests, with Senators Penrose and Oliver and a upited Pennsylvania Republican delegation unflinchingly adhering to the policy of protecting the business and industrial enterprises of their home state, until the bill became a law with these interests all protected.

If this tariff, with the few minor changes proposed, shall be allowed to stand, Pennsylvania wage-earners and Pennsylvania capitalists can look forward to an unprecedented period of prosperity.

But the advance agents of business demoralization, of closed mills and mines and of shut down factories and workshops of every description are abroad in every state. They are preaching Democracy and disseminating false and misleading doctrines and especially are they holding out false hopes to the workingmen, upon whom they count to swing the elections in every debatable district. To the Democratic politicians they are holding out promises of postmasterships and other federal patronage.

They make no mention of the sorrows and sadness that followed the last national Democratic triumph in this country. They do not tell of the popular distress and the destruction of manufacturing, commercial and all other lines of business brought about through the enactment of the Democratic tariff bill.

They show no pictures of the free soup houses that had to be established by charitable individuals and, in some cases, by municipalities where thousands of men, women and children were out of employment for many months, many of them in a starving condition, children without shoes or clothing, and families evicted for nonpayment of rent.

Pennsylvania voters will be called upon at the coming election to send men to congress who will stand by the Taft administration and resist every effort to change or amend the tariff especially those provisions inserted to protect Pennsylvania capital and Pennsylvania wage-earners

Elect Republicans to Congress

Pennsylvania must elect Republican congressmen to block the schemes of the Democrats, who will without doubt be sent from many doubtful districts in other states.

Pennsylvania must, by the size of her Republican majority for John K Tener, nominee for governor, and his colleagues on the Republican state ticket, emphasize the fealty of this state to the cause of Republicanism and the loyalty of the Republicans of the state to the national administration.

Should the Democrats be successful in November in electing a majority of the members of the next national house of representatives, a disastrous period of two years to the mercantile and manufacturing interests would inevitably ensue, and if this period be followed by the election of a Democratic president a calamity would befall the country far greater than was experienced following the last Democratic presidential victory.

Warnings now going out to wage-earners from the most intelligent of the men affiliated with labor organizations point out that now is the time to avert the disaster.

Business men, appreciating the commercial and industrial heights this country has reached during the last twelve years, and the scope and magnitude of our foreign trade, demand that Pennsylvania shall remain steadfast to the cause of Republicanism for their own protection and the safety and salvation of the millions of citizens of this prosperous commonwealth.

Pennsylvania, the Gibraltar of national Republicanism, it is predicted, will roll up a tremendous Republican majority on Nov. 8 and will send practically a solid Republican delegation to congress.

Henry Clay's Eloquence.

It was the remark of a distinguished senator that Henry Clay's eloquence was absolutely intangible to delineation, that the most labored description could not embrace it and that to be understood it must be seen and felt. He was an orator by nature. His eagle eye burned with patriotic ardor or flashed indignation and defiance upon his foes or was suffused with tears of commiseration or of pity, and it was because he felt that he made others feel. A gentleman after hearing one of his magnificent efforts in the senate thus described him: "Every muscle of the orator's face was at work. His whole body seemed agitated, as if each part was instinct with a separate life, and his small, white hand, with its blue veins apparently distended almost to bursting, moved gracefully, but with all the energy of rapid and vehement gesture. The appearance of the speaker seemed that of a pure intellect wrought up to its mightiest energies and brightly shining through the thin and transparent veil of flesh that invested it."—St. Louis Republic.

Taffy For Grandmother.

There is hardly anything that flatters a grandmother more than telling her you don't believe she is one.—Galveston News.

Matrimony as a Business.

The idea that modern woman is not fitted for business in erroneous. Women are proving this every day. Not only are many of them trusted employes of large concerns, but quite as many more are in business on their own account. Some are shrewd and sharp enough to take care of themselves and their investments in the most trying circumstances. Even in the speculative line they have recouped their losses by almost Napoleonic strategy. An instance of this is found in a young and pretty woman who lost $2000 in a bucket shop. She called at her broker's to learn where her money had gone. Successive visits led to a wedding between her and the broker. Two months later she had divorced him, and she is now enjoying an alimony of $2500 a year.

There is no reason why women should not succeed in business. Many have recuperative powers greater than those of men.—Chicago Tribune.

Land Show at Pittsburg.

Arrangements are being made for a mammoth Land Show to be held at Pittsburg, October 17 to 29. The object of the exposition is to provide information to the farmer, the homeseeker and investor regarding land openings and developments in all sections of the country and to show samples of the mineral, agricultural, horticultural and botanical products of the soil, and to teach the students and laymen educational facts concerning land reclamation and irrigation. The exhibits will include those of the United States government, state exhibits, boards of trade, chambers of commerce, commercial bodies, land irrigation companies and state exhibits from all parts.

Real Estate Transfers.

Recorder William Brown has recorded the following real estate transfers in the last week:

Margaret Hartswick to H. W. Small, March 22, 1910, tract land in College township; $250.

Machew Davies et ux to William Wood et ux, September 24, 1910, tract land in Philipsburg; $1250.

Court In Session.

August, 1907, there were a number of people at the residence of the defendant, when the prosecutor came there considerably intoxicated. That the defendant's party were doing some drinking and the prosecutor wanted some and was refused on the ground that he was already intoxicated, when he pulled a $20 bill out of his pocket and as the prosecutor alleges that the defendant took it from him by force, but the defendant and his witnesses as well as some of the Commonwealth's witnesses show that the defendant asked the prosecutor for the $20 and he would take care of it for him. Council for the defendant plead the statute of limitations, the indictment not having been found within two years from the date of the alleged wrongful act, which motion was sustained by the Court.

The next case called was Comm. vs. Frederick Rockey, indicted on several counts, the case being from Spring Township. The defendants asked for a continuance on account of the serious illness of the sister of the defendant and and the constant care required by the mother upon the sick sister, both of them witnesses. Case continued.

Comm. vs. John W. Weaver, prosecutor Samuel Weaver, indicted for forcible entry and detainer. This case was from Taylor Township, while the prosecutor himself lives in College Township, but has a deed for several tracts of land from his father and mother in Taylor Township, while the defendant holds the Sheriff's deed for the same premises. The prosecutor had possession of the premises by himself and tenants until sometime in May, 1910, when the last tenant removed and the premises being vacant for several days the defendant gained possession May 16, 1910, whereupon this action was brought and the Commonwealth not showing that the prosecutor was actually and forcibly dispossessed and was not put in fear, nor was there a disturbance of the public peace caused by the entry of the defendant. At the close of the Commonwealth's testimony the Court held that the Commonwealth had failed to make out a case of forcible entry and detainer and that the testimony would not sustain a conviction. The case was then submitted to the jury on the question of costs without argument. The jury divided the costs, equally.

Comm. vs. James Johnson, indicted for desertion and non-support of wife, and desertion and non-support of children. Prosecutors, B. F. Vonada and Jerry Lucas, Over-seers-of-the-Poor of Marion Township. Defendant pled guilty and sentence was suspended on condition that the defendant support his children.

Comm. vs. Mary Reix, indicted for assult and battery. Prosecutrix Esther M. Hinds. This case is from Philipsburg and grows out of an alercation on Second Street in said Borough between these two women, the defendent being colored. Verdict of guilty, but the jury add that they are sorry that they have no power to punish the prosecutrix and they believe she provoked the assault.

Novel Horseback Ride.

A jolly party enjoyed a novel horseback ride over Tussey mountain last week, the trip being arranged in honor of Manuel Walls, a member of the Spanish legation, at Washington, D. C. In the party were Theodore Boal and his son, T. Air Boal, of Boalsburg; Mr. and Mrs. George B. Thompson and Harold Foster, of State College. The party were out for five days, a supply train being constantly following up the rear. The route followed was from Boalsburg across the Tussey mountain, through the Bear meadows, to Milroy, down the Kishacoquillas Valley, to Greenwood furnace, to McElavey's Fort and returning across Tussey mountain, and through Pine Grove Mills. Mr. Walls is a friend of the Boal family and is a guest at the Boal home, at Boalsburg. The trip was arranged to give him some idea of Pennsylvania mountains and proved to be a very enjoyable event.

Running From a Sinking Ship.

The Keystone party is disintegrating. Almost before it is born the new combination of political discontents is going to pieces. One by one the men who belong to it and who amount to something are leaving the sinking ship. With the campaign yet two months to run, the flags of distress are sailing over the self-appointed party of the Hon. William H. Berry and a crash upon the rocks seems inevitable.

To those who are familiar with the personal make-up of the Keystone party management the present state of chaos and confusion is not at all surprising. The Keystone party has been hoodooed from the day it passed into the ownership and control of Mr. Berry and his little coterie of followers of William Jennings Bryan. On August 4th., "The Republican" pointed out that the Keystone party had fallen into the possession of the Bryanites, that it was then held hard and fast by Mr. Berry and his personal agents and that it would be used to advance the cause of Bryanism in Pennsylvania. Confirming this was the action of the Keystone party managers who two weeks later forced their State Committee to adopt resolutions pledging the party to put up candidates for Congress and the State Legislature. Following up this step in his program, Mr. Berry saw to it that the Keystone outfit at once proceeded to aid n the election of Democratic candidates for Congress and thus endeavor to establish a Democratic majority in the Senate and House at Washington.

In the last few days the leading independent Republicans who helped organize the Keystone party have been dropping out. They have come to the realization that they cannot maintain their patriotism and be a party to the Berry program. Their desertion of the Berry party is most significant and should stand as a warning to all men who are sincere and who want to do that which they believe to be for the best for the public welfare.

Former State Treasurer John O. Sheatz is one of those who has repudiated his recent affiliation with the Keystone party. He last week publicly announced his resignation from the State Committee of the Keystone party. Mr. Sheatz was one of the originators of the Keystone party. He not only took an active part in organizing the new party but through his influence others of prominence were induced to leave the Republican ranks and become a part of the movement. Mr. Sheatz could not accept the situation when he saw the Keystone party being used as a scheme to elect Democratic congressmen. When he quit the party a few days ago he remarked: "I am a Republican."

Equally significant is the action of Charles Heber Clark, a prominent independent Republican in Montgomery County. Like Mr. Sheatz, he was one of the prime movers in organizing the Keystone party, but when he saw that Mr. Berry was forcing it into the position of trying to break down the Republican majority in Congress, Mr. Clark promptly withdrew. Mr. Berry had his Montgomery County managers indorse the Democratic nominee for Congress in the Eighth district, a man who is a free trader and opposed to the protective tariff principle. Unwilling to be a party to any such scheme, Mr. Clark resigned and gave as his reason for so doing the following:

> I will never permit myself to be used for the undermining in the National House of Representatives of that protective tariff system which, in my judgment, is of vital importance to the welfare, not only of wage earners, but of all the people of the land. I am confident that the election of a majority of Democrats or even a majority of fanatical tariff revisionists to the next Congress will produce wide-spread depression of business and inflict hurt upon multitudes of innocent people. My hands shall be free from the guilt of helping to produce that great calamity.

Still another independent Republican to refuse to aid Mr. Berry elect a Democratic majority in Congress is former Congressman H. B. Packer, of Tioga County. Mr. Packer was a prominent supporter of the Keystone party until the hand of Mr. Berry was exposed. Knowing what a Democratic majority in Congress would mean to the great business interests of Pennsylvania Mr. Packer refused to have his name identified with the proposition.

As matters stand at the present time, Mr. Berry and a few other Bryanites continue in possession of the Keystone party. Apparently no one envies them a treasure of such doubtful value. The remaining weeks of the campaign will see this value experience a still greater decline.

Every Republican who has stood true and loyally by his party colors must rejoice that he was strong enough to refuse to be tempted away by the so-called reformers of the Berry type. The contrast between the Republican party and Mr. Berry's new party is most striking. From the opening of the campaign the Republican party has been resting upon a firm foundation, gaining in strength with each day and maintaining a course so dignified as to shame its opponents. Mr. Tener, our nominee for Governor, is to be congratulated that he has been attacked by such men as Berry. In light of recent events it would appear that the Keystone party's greatest element of weakness is that it is tagged with Mr. Berry's label, countersigned by Bryan.

It is no wonder that for days past the air has been filled with rumors that the Keystone party managers want Mr. Berry to withdraw from the ticket. Whether he does it now or puts it off until Tuesday, November 8, the verdict is already rendered and it is that Mr. Berry must go 'way back and sit down.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING

Mrs. Luther Yarrjson. of Near Carroll, Victim of Fiery Bolt.

Portions of Nittany and Sugar Valleys were visited by a terrific storm on Sunday night lightning striking the home of John Yarrison, midway between Carroll and Rauchtown. Mrs. Yarrison and another lady were standing on the front porch at the time. The lightning followed a telephone wire leading into the house, under the porch roof.

Two other houses were struck by lightning on the same night. The home of James Kritz, one mile from the Yarrison house, was struck, the lightning tearing off some of the weather boards. The home of Charles Harbach, about two miles from the Yarrison house, was struck. The lighting tore away the front porch.

Howard.

Mrs. Julia A., wife of A. A. Pletcher, mention of whose death was made exclusively in "The Republican" last week, was born at Pine Grove Mills January 6, 1951, and died September 22, 1910, being aged 59 years, 8 months and 16 days. She was a daughter of the late Jacob and Hannah Zimmerman, members of a well known Centre county family. Her early life was spent in the community of her birth and in 1878 she was married at Bellefonte to A. A. Pletcher, who located at Nittany and was for many years engaged in school teaching. There she lived a quiet, uneventful life and won the friendship of all who chanced to make her acquaintance. In her girlhood she united with the Presbyterian church and continued faithful throughout her life and rendered herself useful in many ways. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Pletcher—Alma, wife of Howard Robb, of Howard; Orpha, wife of Carl Noll, of Pitcairn, and Arthur E., who died in childhood. Funeral services were held at the home here Saturday morning, at ten o'clock, services being conducted by Rev. A. D. Bateman, pastor of the Mill Hall Presbyterian church. The remains were laid to rest in the Presbyterian cemetery at Jacksonville.

Among the friends and relatives from a distance who attended the funeral of Mrs. Pletcher here on Saturday we noted the following: D. A. McKibben and wife and Mrs. Frances McKibben, of Salona; Huston and Miss Kate McKibben, of Parvin; H. E. Zimmerman and wife, Mrs. Alice Robb and daughter Lottie, of Bellefonte; John H. Beck and wife, of Nittany; Prof. James M. Lord, of Lock Haven; Nancy Pletcher, of Flemington; S. S. Pletcher, Washington, D. C.; James C. Hayes and daughter Rilla, and A. B. Hayes and wife, of Clintondale.

The futile efforts of the correspondent to get into communication with the editor last Wednesday deprived us of making mention of the sad scalding accident that befell little Flossie Haines, the nine year old daughter of W. B. Haines, who lives about two miles north of Howard. Flossie was in the act of handing her elder sister Anna some wood to put in the stove when the wash boiler tipped over and the greater part of the boiling hot water it contained poured down over the unfortunate child. A large portion of her body from the shoulders down was scalded and it was thought that she could not live. Dr. O. W. McEntire was called and did all he could to relieve the child's sufferings. The next day she rallied and has since been gradually improving and there are reasons to believe that she will recover.

It is not unfrequent that long-ago residents come back to Howard to visit the haunts of the childhood and this summer there has been an unusual number. Last week we had as a visitor John Miller, a son of Theodore Miller, at one time one of our well known citizens. It has been thirty years since Mr. Miller visited the place of his birth and of course there are many changes about town, while there are also many new faces and a great many that were once familiar to him are now no more. Mr. Miller is now located in Wisconsin and doing well in that state.

"Pat" Wagner was a visitor with his cousin in Boalsburg on Wednesday and Thursday of last week.

The reissuing of the Bellefonte Daily necessitated the employment of an extra hand at the Hustler office and of course we find Fred's old standby, James Bayard, of Bellefonte, again at the case.

Miss Mittie Lucas, our ever popular milliner, has returned from the city with all the latest fashions and creations in ladies head gear and will be prepared to serve her many patrons in her same obliging and satisfactory manner.

Miss Alma Packer, of Pittsburg, arrived in town last Friday and will spend some time with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Robb, Sr.

The fore part of last week William and Harry Wetzel got a new whistle for their automobile and when they first came out many persons were deceived, thinking it was a passenger train on the Bald Eagle railroad, there being a great similarity in the whistle. But the joke was turned, however, that night. Willie with his friend "Bob" Rothrock and their lady friends went for a pleasure ride that evening and about the time they should have been returning home the axle of their machine broke and they were left far from home. The boys, to prove their gallantry, endeavored to hire a farmer to bring them home, but as all had been working their horses hard no one was found who would perform the service, so they set out afoot and arrived in town at a time we would not want to mention, but late enough to cause their parents much anxiety.

George Long, son of miller W. H. Long, finished the week of school for Howard Robb in Benner township, Mr. Robb being called home by the death of his wife's mother, Mrs. Pletcher.

Clifford Holter, only son of Christian Holter, left last week for Valparaiso, Ind., where he has entered a business school and being a bright and studious young man will doubtless make good marks in his school work.

Mrs. H. S. Pletcher returned home last Friday from a month's tour to Philadelphia, New York, Atlantic City and Washington, D. C.

The farmers have commenced cutting their corn and from all appearances they will have one of the largest yields they have had for years.

A. W. Gardner, one of our aged citizens who has seen very little sickness in his life is now quite ill, his ailment having symptoms of liver trouble.

Cameron and John B. Holter were business visitors to Bellefonte on Saturday.

Mrs. Alonza Schenck, of Wilmerding, arrived in town on Friday for a visit with relatives.

Ira C. Johnson was down from State College on Saturday to attend the funeral of Mrs. Pletcher.

Pearl Thomas, one of the instructors at the Pennsylvania State College, was home with his parents over Sunday.

Clair Leathers visited in Mill Hall, on Saturday.

Insurance agent George Russell, of Mill Hall, was in town on Friday looking after his interests.

Mrs. W. E. Confer, with two of her children, Ward and Pearl, and her grandson, Donald Shay, was shopping in Bellefonte on Saturday.

Arthur Long left the latter part of the week for Cleveland, Ohio, on a business trip.

A jolly party of Beech Creek young folks enjoyed a straw ride to this place last Friday evening and were entertained by Miss Emma Pletcher.

Thomas E. Mayes, of Bellefonte, was a visitor in Howard on Sunday with his brother and sister.

Z. T. Weirick, who has been employed at his trade in Altoona, spent Sunday with his family here.

P. J. Kelly, a veteran of the Civil war who saw some hard service in Co. D, 1st. Cavalry and who took part in the great fight at Gettysburg, left on Sunday for the famous battlefield, where on Tuesday he witnessed the unveiling of the monument to the Pennsylvania veterans who participated in the battle.

Henry Gault and family visited on Sunday at Bald Eagle.

John Betz, of Reedsville, arrived here on Sunday and is visiting his brother G. M. Betz at Jacksonville.

Vinton Schenck was down from Renovo on Sunday to visit his parents.

Harry McCauley, of Hublersburg, was a guest at the home of W. L. Cook.

Mrs. A. M. Butler made a visit to Bellefonte on Sunday with her aged mother who has been quite ill.

Mrs. W. A. White arrived in Howard on Sunday for a visit with friends.

Charles Candy, wife and son, of Tyrone, spent a few days with relatives here.

Miss Jennie Wyble was down from Bellefonte to spend Sunday with her parents.

Leathers Brothers who have been promoting a large real estate deal at the thriving town of Northumberland this summer have arranged for a lot sale to take place on Saturday, October 8. The boys know how to conduct these sales and that will probably be a big day in the railroad town.

This community was visited by two very severe rain and hail storms Sunday afternoon, but no great damage is reported. The showers continued all afternoon and evening.

Lester Bowes is preparing to move his household goods to Northumberland this week and as he is located there will open a grocery store in that promising place.

Quite a delegation of Howard citizens were passengers to Bellefonte Monday morning. Some were on business bent, some were going to their employment and still others were answering their call to jury duty. Among the number we noticed H. A. Moore; Dr. W. J. Kurtz, Fred and George Leathers, Charles Confer, I. R. Williams, William and John Loder, Lionel Shay, J. Linn Pletcher, and Constable LeRoy Leathers.

Mr. and Mrs. Elliot Gardner, who reside at Beech Creek, are rejoicing over the arrival of a daughter at their home a few days since.

Sherman Hoover, who has been in Washington State for over a year, returned home on Sunday.

George Moran who has been visiting friends in Pittsburg and Williamsport, is home again.

Our boys shut out the Milesburg team on Saturday afternoon to the tune of 2—0. Southpaw Emerick was on the slab for the locals and had the Milesburgers at his mercy throughout the game. Both teams put up championship ball, no scoring being done until the eighth inning, when the locals rallied and batted in two runs. This is how it happened: Fisher went to first on four wide ones and stole second. Heaton found one to his liking and pushed it over the left fielder's head, scoring Fisher and landing on first. The next two at bat were easy outs, when Morrison stepped up ty the plate and smashed the first ball out to deep center for three bases, scoring Heaton. The next man up fouled out, leaving Morrison on third. Next Saturday our boys will play the same team, at Milesburg.

Rev. M. D. Ezekiel, of Cyprus, lectured on the Christian martyrdom of Turkey in the Methodist Episcopal church on Sunday evening.

Roy Miles and family, of Pitcairn, stopped off to visit friends on their return trip from New York and Philadelphia.

Mrs. W. U. Irwin returned home from New York on Thursday.

A pretty wedding was that in this borough, on Thursday evening, last, when Miss Marian C. Rumberger became the bride of Francis A. Holderman. The ceremony was performed by Rev S. S. Oyler, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Rumberger. Miss Pauline Smith was bridesmaid and Howard Peters was best men. The bride is one of the most popular young women in this vicinity. Mr. Holderman is in the flour business at this place and is a splendid young man. After the wedding ceremony delicious refreshments were served and then the happy young couple departed on the 7.57 train for Williamsport and other points. A large number of guests were in attendance and all joined in extending hearty congratulations to the bride and groom. On Monday evening Mr. and Mrs. Holderman returned from their wedding tour and on their arrival here they were royally welcomed with a band, while others in the crowd were armed with horns, cowbells, guns, cannons and a large horse fiddle. Mr. and Mrs. Holderman graciously acknowledged the tribute and the crowd gave three hearty cheers, after which they proceeded to J. C. Stere & Son's store for their treat. The young men received cigars and the ladies and children candy. Thanks, Asbury.

"BACK TO THE FARM"

XI.—Rural Education—The Agricultural College.

By C. V. GREGORY.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

IN 1862 congress passed a law appropriating money for the establishment of colleges of agriculture and mechanic arts. Today there are sixty-seven such institutions in the United States. The establishment of the agricultural colleges opened up an entirely new field of education. The study of science and the application of that science to the problems of everyday life began to take the place of the study of classics. Educating a man merely to have him educated began to go out of style, and the truer education that better fits a man to tackle the problems of life took its place.

The growth of the agricultural colleges was slow at first, and not until within the last fifteen years have they really come to fill the place for which they were designed. At first the idea of educating a farmer was laughable to many people who rejoiced in a little learning. Even the farmer himself did not realize the advantage of a college education to a man who must make a living from the soil. It took a good many years to bring people to realize that college education is as valuable for a farmer as for a doctor or a lawyer. The main difference is that the law compels a man to get a college diploma before he starts to practice medicine, while he may start farming with nothing but a team and a plow.

Even at the present time there are many men both on the farm and in the cities who doubt the value of a college education for the farmer. Many a farm boy is squarely confronted with the problem of choosing between four years in college or starting to farm at once. Four years is a long time to a young man. Fifteen hundred to $2,000 is a large sum of money to him. To spend both for a college education requires a great deal of courage and faith in the future.

The amount of money necessary to pay four years' expenses in college will enable the young man to start farming on a rented farm. The four years will, if he is industrious, enable him to earn enough to make a good sized payment on a farm of his own. If he goes to college he will have nothing at the end of the four years but the experience and knowledge he has gained there. Is it worth it?

I have put this question squarely to dozens of men in their last year at an agricultural college. Without exception they say that it is worth the outlay. Not one regretted the time or the money which he had bartered for his education. Few of them placed it on a money basis alone, but even from that standpoint they considered that the chances were in favor of the college man.

The boy who starts farming for himself without any education will run up against a good many snags which the college man will miss. He will learn by experience many of the things which the college man learns in school. In doing so he will pay much dearer for his knowledge. The old prejudice against "book farming" is fast disappearing. People are coming to realize that book farming is merely the fused experience of successful farmers everywhere, explained and illumined by the light of science. Probably in no one respect is the advantage of the college man more clearly apparent than in the case of soil fertility. Long after the untrained man has begun to notice and wonder at the decline of his crop yields the man who has studied the science of soil fertility will be raising undiminished crops. The art of keeping up the soil fertility cannot be learned from the neighbors, for they have not practiced it. It cannot be learned from father or grandfather, for in their day the fertility of the soil was considered inexhaustible.

The success of the agricultural college graduate cannot be measured in money alone. The agricultural communities just now need leaders much more than they need men who can simply make money on their own farms. It is necessary for the agricultural college graduate to succeed on his own farm, of course. His every move is closely watched by critical neighbors. Even the shadow of a failure starts a chorus of "I told you so."

Success on his own farm is the first essential to the young man who would be a leader. Given that for backing, he can do almost anything he wants to with his community. Farmers have a vast deal of respect for the man who can do things. Their prejudice against college farming is lost in admiration for the results achieved by the college farmer. If he advises organizing a club they are willing to join in and help. If he tells them the school needs reorganizing they are willing to be convinced. They may even consent to bringing two or three schools together and using the money saved to hire better teachers. The inspiration of one man's success and the energy imparted by him is sufficient to start a whole community to thinking. Once you get a man to thinking, there is no need to worry further about him. He will take care of himself.

If an energetic young farmer with an agricultural education could be placed in each township throughout the farming sections the results would be an enlightened agriculture that would be the envy of the whole world. A leading educator recently made the statement that three live agricultural college graduates could in ten years increase the value of the land in any agricultural county $20 per acre. That sounds incredible, but it is literally true. The community would become so progressive that it would be worth $20 an acre more to live there.

The charge has been made that agricultural college graduates do not go back to the farm. The facts do not bear out this assertion. While the percentage varies, it is safe to say that fully 50 per cent of the graduates go directly to the farm. The others go into some work closely related to farming. In my acquaintance with young men just finishing college I have known of very few who were not anxious to go to farming. A good many of them do not do so because of lack of capital. They have spent all their money in college, and it looks to them like uphill business to start farming without a cent. They are overwhelmed with offers of salaried positions at salaries of from $1,000 to $2,000 a year to start with. Experiment stations, agricultural colleges, agricultural papers and manufacturers of agricultural products are all looking for agricultural college graduates.

Many of the men go into some work of this kind until they can save money enough to start farming.

Of the college graduates who do take up farming as a business the greater number rent the home farm or go into partnership with their respective fathers. This is the ideal way for a young man to get a start. Under such favorable circumstances he cannot help but succeed. Often, however, there are enough brothers at home to occupy all the land. The young college farmer must look elsewhere for a job. Every year the agricultural colleges are receiving a larger number of calls for farm managers. Many of these offers are exceedingly liberal. They come for the most part from farmers who wish to retire from active work and at the same time do not wish to sell or rent their farms. They are often willing to take the right sort of a young man in on a partnership basis or give him a per centage of the net profits. A position of this kind is the next best thing to owning a farm.

Although an agricultural college education is of great value, it must not be taken from what I have said that success without such an education is impossible. Many farmer boys are not fitted for an education of this kind either by temperament or ability. Many others are so situated that they cannot be away from home for four years. Still others do not have the money. For these boys an agricultural college education is an impossibility. To teach them something about their business some other form of education is necessary. This is being supplied by the secondary schools. The work of these schools will be described in the next article.

PRIZES FOR RAILROADERS

Pennsy. Distributes $5400 Among Men Having Best Track.

With a view to maintaining a healthy rivalry among its track supervisors and assistant supervisors, the Pennsylvania Railroad distributes annually the sum of $5,400, in premiums to those whose divisions have been kept in the most perfect condition during the year. The premiums for 1910, six in number, were distributed on September 22, at Harrisburg, at the close of the first day of the general manager's thirty-eighth annual track inspection, on which the general manager was accompanied by his entire staff of officers, including some 350 men in the operating department of the railroad.

To insure that the premiums shall be awarded upon accurate data, a committee of maintenance of way officers goes over the line every few weeks during the year in a car attached to one of the regular high speed trains. Two glasses of water are placed on the sills of two rear windows and every spill of water is counted against the score of the section of track over which the train is passing. To make the record even more accurate, an instrument has been specially designed to register every vibration of the car, either vertically or horizontally. The smaller the amount of vibration, the better the track.

The special main line track inspection committee for the year 1909-10 consisted of Joseph T. Richards, chief engineer maintenance of way, Chairman; L. R. Zollinger, engineer maintenance of way; H. A. Jaggard, superintendent Elmira division; J. B. Baker, superintendent Philadelphia terminal division, and E. B. John, superintendent Delaware division. Their awards were as follows:

The first premium, that of $1200., of which $800 goes to the Supervisor and $400 to the Assistant Supervisor having the best line and surface between Jersey City and Pittsburgh and Philadelphia and Washington, was awarded to Supervisor George Goldie, Jr., and Assistant Supervisor, R. R. Nace, who have charge of the track from Sixty-Second Street, West Philadelphia, to Wilmington.

The four premiums of $800, each, of which $600 goes to the supervisor and $200 to the assistant supervisor having the best line and surface on a Main line superintendent's division between Jersey City and Pittsburg and Philadelphia and Washington, were awarded as follows:

Supervisor W. F. Rench and Assistant Supervisor S. L. Church, who have charge of the track between Girard Avenue Bridge, West Philadelphia, and Tullytown, Pa.

Supervisor G. R. Simmickson, and Assistant Supervisor H. A. Gass, who have charge of the track between Woodbine Avenue, West Philadelphia, and a point just west of Coatesville.

Supervisor J. A. Burchenal, and Assistant Supervisor E. C. Silvius, who have charge of the track between Durward and Longfellow, Pa.

Supervisor F. L. Pitcher, and Assistant Supervisor W. W. Hubley, who have charge of the track between New Florence and George Station on the Pittsburgh division.

The improvement premium of $1,000, of which $700 goes to the supervisor and $300 to the assistant supervisor showing the greatest improvement in line and surface on the main line between Jersey City and Pittsburgh and Philadelphia and Washington, was awarded to Supervisor H. E. Waters and Assistant Supervisor Frederick Evans, who have charge of the track between Baltimore and Springfield, Md.

Edible Birds' Nests.

Birds' nests as food have seemed a legend to most of us. They appear to be really used as such in China and Hong Kong and Singapore, and in a report to our government Vice Consal General Hansen of Bangkok writes of them, confirming all the legends that have been sung of this alleged delicacy. The nests are found off the coast of Siam and are the products of a bird called "swilt," and it seems that the nests are made edible through the salivary secretions of the bird in building the nests. The season for gathering them is between September and April, and those who gather them compel a bird to build three in the course of the season, for the bird, as soon as it is deprived of one nest, starts to build another, and this, too, is stolen, and then it proceeds to construct a third, in which, however, it is permited to lay its eggs, and after the birds have finished with the nest it is collected. Siam last year exported nests amounting to 17,781 pounds and valued at $109,009. The edible nests are consumed by the Chinese who regard them as a great table delicacy, and the vice consul general says the nests bring prices which range from $15 to $25 a pound. Travelers in China will have a care as to what they eat when guests of the elite. Even those who are accustomed to terrapin may well question the edibility of birds' nests. Boston Advertiser.

Unclaimed Letters.

The following letters remain unclaimed at the Bellefonte post office for the last week: Chester W. Church, George Dedone, F. E. Farmison, Lemuel J. Hudson, A. L. Keeler, Alexander Lucas, Fred E. Meyer, David Wyler. Persons calling for these letters will kindly explain to the postmaster that the same have been advertised in "The Republican."

FALL OPENING

We announce our second annual fall opening with a deep feeling of gratitude to our many patrons, who have helped make our store such a grand success. We have received so many kind words, such flattering encouragement, such substantial tokens of hearty approval in the practical shape of public patronage from all classes in Bellefonte and surrounding country that words fail to express our gratitude. We open the fall season with the grandest stock of

Men's, Youths' and Boys' Clothing

Hats, caps, shoes and furnishings ever brought to this city. You are cordially invited to look over our show windows, our stock and by your critical verdict we propose to stand or fall; and as it is with the clothing for men and boys so it is with hats, shoes and furnishings, if there be a man or woman at all skeptical concerning the great bargains we offer in mens and boys clothing.

Hats, Shoes, Furnishings

They are the very people of all the people we want to reach—we want to preach to them the doctrine of true economy and conviction will quickly follow once they visit us. It is truthful advertising that has made us what we are—the busiest store, the recognized leaders, the commercial thermometer of the clothing business, the envy of every competitor.

We strive incessantly to please you and your patronage is our reward.

The GOOSE GIRL

By HAROLD MacGRATH

Copyright, 1909, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

It was Carmichael.

What an opportunity for scandal! She laughed inwardly. The barons and their wives, the ambassadors' wives and their daughters, would miss them both. And the spirit of deviltry lay also upon her heart. She smiled at the man and with her fan bade him be seated at her side.

"You have not asked me to dance tonight," she declared.

"I am neither a prince nor an ambassador."

"But you have danced with me."

"Yes; I have been to heaven now and then."

"And do you eject yourself thus easily?"

"By turning myself out my self esteem remains unruffled."

"Then you expected to be turned out?"

"As I have said, I am not a prince. I am only a consul, not even a diplomat, simply a business arm of my government. My diplomacy never ascends above the quality of hops and wines imported. I am supposed to take in any wandering sailor, feed him and ship him home. I am also the official guide of all American tourists."

"AND BECAUSE I LOVE HER!"

"That is no reason."

"Your father"— He should have said the grand duke.

"Ah, yes; my father, the chancellor, the ambassadors and their wives and daughters! I begin to believe that you have grown afraid of them."

"I confess that I have. I had an adventure last night. Would you like to hear about it?"

"Tell me."

He told her.

"A veiled lady," she mused. "What would you say if I told you that your mystery is no mystery at all? I am the veiled lady. And the person I went to see was my old nurse, my foster mother, with whom I spent the happiest, freest days of my life in the garret at Dresden. Pouf! All mysteries may be dispelled if we go to the right person. So you are to be recalled?"

"I have asked for my recall, your highness."

"And so Dreiberg no longer appeals to you? You once told me that you loved it."

"I am cursed with wanderlust, your highness."

"You promised to tell me what she is like."

Suddenly all his fear went away, all his trepidation. The spirit of recklessness which had vised him a little while ago again empowered him. He was afraid of nothing.

"How shall I describe her?" he said. "I have seen only paintings and marbles, and these are inanimate. Have you ever seen ripe wheat in a rainstorm? That is the color of her hair. There are jade and lapis lazuli in her eyes." He leaned toward her. "And I love her better than life, better than hope, and between us there is the distance of a thousand worlds. So I must give up the dream and go away, as an honorable man should."

Neither of them heard the chancellor's approach.

"And because I love her!"

Her fan dropped to the floor.

"Your highness," broke in the cold, even tones of Herbeck, "your father is making inquiries about you."

Carmichael rose instantly, white as the frill in his shirt.

Hildegarde, however, was a princess. She gained her feet leisurely, with a half smile on her lips.

"Count, Herr Carmichael tells me that he is soon to leave Dreiberg."

"Ah!" There was satisfaction in Herbeck's ejaculation. But there was a glint of admiration in his eyes as he recognized the challenge in Carmichael's. "We shall miss Herr Carmichael."

Her highness moved serenly toward the door. Carmichael waited till she was gone from sight; then he stooped and picked up the fan.

* * * * * * *

The entrance to the vast ducal vineyards was made through a small lodge where the ducal vintner lived and kept his books and moneys till such time as he should be required to place them before the proper official. Upon the morning following the ball at the palace the vintner was reclining against the outside wall of the gates, smoking his china pipe and generally at peace with the world. He discerned a solitary figure approaching from the direction of Dreiberg—a youthful figure, buoyant of step and confident. Herr Hoffman was rather interested. The youth paused at the gate and inspected the old man highly.

"Herr Hoffman, I want work."

"So? What can you do?"

The youth recounted his abilities.

"I have a letter to you also."

"Let me see it."

Hoffman saw it, but with starting eyes. There was, then, something new under the sun. A picker of grapes recommended by a princess!

"Du lieber Gott! You are Leopold Dietrich?"

"Yes, herr."

"How did you come by this letter?"

"Her serene highness is patron to Gretchen, the goose girl, at whose request the recommendation was given me."

This altered matters. The two entered the office.

"Can you write?"

"A little, herr."

"Then write your name on this piece of paper and that. Each night you will present yours with the number of pounds, which will be credited to you. You must bring it back each morning. If you lose it you will be paid nothing for your labor."

Dietrich wrote his name twice. Still Hoffman was not wholly satisfied with his eyes.

"Gottlieb," he said to one of the men, "take him to terrace 98. We'll see what sort of workman he is." He spoke to Dietrich again. "What is Gretchen to you?" For Hoffman knew Gretchen.

"She is my sweetheart, herr." And there was no mockery in the youth's eyes as he said this.

"Take him along, Gottlieb."

Terrace 98 was given over to small grapes. Thus many bunches had to be picked to fill the basket. But Dietrich went to work with a will. His fingers were deft, and his knife was sharp, and by midsun he had turned his sixth basket, which was fair work, considering.

As Hoffman did not feed his employees, Dietrich was obliged to beg from his coworkers. Very willingly they shared with him their coarse bread and onions. He ate the bread and stuffed the onions in his pocket. Once more the youth was alone. He set down his basket and laughed. Was there ever such a fine world? The very danger of it was the spice which gave it flavor.

"I love her, I love her!" His face grew bright again, and the wooing blood ran tingling in his veins. "Am I a thief, a scoundrelly thief, because I have that right common to all men to love one woman? Some day I shall suffer for this; some day my heart shall ache. So be it!"

His fingers were growing sore and sticky and there was a twinge in his back as he shouldered his eighth basket and scrambled down to the man who weighed the pick. He was beginning his ninth when he saw Gretchen coming along the purple aisle.

"What a beautiful day!" said Gretchen, with a happy laugh.

"Kiss me."

"When you fill that basket."

"Not before?"

"Not even a little one," mischief in her glance.

Out came the knife, and the vintner plied himself furiously. Gretchen had a knife of her own, and she joined him.

"There!" he said at last. "That's what I call work. But it is worth it. Now!"

Gretchen put her hands behind her back, closed her eyes and raised her chin. He kissed not only the lovely mouth, but the eyes and cheeks and hair.

"I ask only for your love, Gretchen—only that." And he pressed her hands. "All men are rogues more or less. There are so many currents and eddies entering into a man's life. It is made up of a thousand variant interests. No; man's love is never like a woman's. But remember this, Gretchen—I loved you the best I knew how, as a man loves but once, honorable as it was possible, purely and dearly."

He ripped a bunch of grapes from the vine, a thing no careful vintner should do, and held it toward her.

"Have you ever heard of the kissing cherries?" he asked.

She shook her head. He explained.

"This bunch will do very well."

He took one grape at the bottom in his teeth. Gingerly Gretchen did the same. Their lips met in a smothered laughter. Then they tried it again.

And this Watteau picture met the gaze of two persons on the terrace below. The empurpling face of one threatened an explosion, but the smiling face of the other restrained the vocal thunder. The old head vintner kicked a stone savagely. Gretchen and her lover turned.

CHAPTER XIII.

A WHITE SCAR.

"YOU"— began the steward.

"Patience, Hoffman!" warned her highness. Then she laughed blithely.

"Your hat, scoundrel!" cried Hoffman.

The vintner snatched off his hat apologetically and swung it around on the tips of his fingers.

"Is this the way you work?"

"I have picked nine baskets."

"You should have picked twelve."

It interested her highness to note that this handsome young fellow was not afraid of the head vintner. So this was Gretchen's lover? He was really handsome. There was nothing coarse about his features or figure.

The pause was broken by Gretchen.

"Pardon, highness!"

"For what, Gretchen?"

"For not having seen your approach."

"That was my fault, not yours. When is the wedding?"

"After the vintage, highness."

Her highness then spoke to the bridegroom elect. "You will be good to her?"

"Who could help it, your highness?"

The pronoun struck her oddly, for peasants as a usual thing never used it in addressing the nobility.

"Well, on the day of the wedding I will stand sponsor to you both. And good luck go with you."

She passed down the aisle, the head vintner following, wagging his head.

The day was ended. The lad swung the basket to his shoulder, and the sun, flashing upon its contents, turned the bloomy globes into dull rubies. He presented his card at the office and was duly credited with three crowns, which, according to Gretchen, was a fine day's work. Hoffman said nothing about dismissal.

"Come day after tomorrow. Tomorrow is a feast day. You are always having feast days when work begins. All summer long you loaf about, but the minute you start to work you must find excuses to lay off. Clear out, both of you!"

"Work at last," said Dietrich as he and Gretchen started for the city.

Arm in arm they went on. Sometimes Gretchen sang. Often he put her hand to his lips. By and by they came abreast of an old gypsy. He wore a coat of Joseph's, and his face was as lined as a frost bitten apple.

"Will you tell me how to find the Adlergasse?" he asked in broken German. His accent was that of a Magyar.

They carelessly gave him specific directions and passed on. He followed grimly, like fate, whose agent he was, though long delayed. When he reached the Adlergasse he looked for a sign. He came to a stop in front of the dingy shop of the clock mender. He went inside, and the ancient clock mender looked up from his work, for he was always working. He rose wearily.

The gypsy smiled mysteriously and laid a hand on his heart.

"Who are you?" sharply demanded the clock mender.

"Who I am does not matter. I am he whom you seek."

"God in heaven!" The bony hands of the clock mender clutched the other's coat.

The gypsy released himself slowly. "But first show me your pretty crowns and the paper which will give me immunity from the police. Your crowns, as you offered, and immunity; then I speak."

"Man, I can give you the crowns, but God knows I have no longer the power to give you immunity."

The gypsy shouldered his bundle.

"For God's sake, wait!" begged the clock mender.

But the gypsy walked out, unheeding.

* * * * * * *

Two days later, in the afternoon.

"Grumbach," said Carmichael, "what were you looking at the other night with those opera glasses at the ball?"

"I was looking into the past."

"Oh, pshaw! You were following her highness with them. I want to know why."

"She is beautiful."

"You made a promise to me not long ago."

"I did?" noncommittally.

"Yes. Soon I shall be shaking the dust of Dreiberg, and I want to know beforehand what this Chinese puzzle is. What did you do that compelled your flight from Ehrenstein?"

Grumbach's pipe hung pendulent in his hand. He swung it to and fro absently.

"I am waiting. Remember, you are an American citizen for all that you were born here. If anything should happen to you I must know the whole story in order to help you. You know that you may trust me."

"It isn't that, captain. I have grown to like you in these few days. Those opera glasses—it was an idea. Well, since you will know, I was a gardener's boy. I worked under my brother Hermann. I used to ask the nurse, who had charge of her serene highness, where she would go each day. Then I'd cut flowers and meet them on the road somewhere and give the bouquet to the child. There was never any escort—a footman and a driver. The little one was always greatly pleased, and she would call me Hans. I was in love those days." Grumbach laughed with bitterness. "Yes, even I. Her name was Tekla, and she was a jade. I wanted to run away, but I had no money. I had already secured a passport—no matter how. It was the first affair, and I was desperately hot. One day a gypsy came to me. I shall always know him by the yellow spot in one of his black eyes. I was given a thousand crowns to tell him which road her highness was to be driven over the next day. As I said, I was mad with love. Why a gypsy should want to know where her highness was going to ride was of no consequence to me. I told him. I was to get the money the same night. It was thus that her highness was stolen. It was thus that I became accessory before the fact, as the lawyers say. Flight with a band of Magyar gypsies; weary days in the mountains, with detachments of troops scouring the whole duchy. Finally I escaped. A fortune was offered for the immediate return of the child. At the time I believed that it was an abduction for ransom. But no one ever came forward for the reward. There was a price on my head when it was known that I had fled."

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION SUBMITTED TO THE CITIZENS OF THIS COMMONWEALTH FOR THEIR APPROVAL OR REJECTION, BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA, AND PUBLISHED BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF THE COMMONWEALTH, IN PURSUANCE OF ARTICLE XVIII OF THE CONSTITUTION.

Number One.

A CONCURRENT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to section twenty-six of article five of the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Resolved (if the Senate concur), That the following amendment to section twenty-six of article five of the Constitution of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:—

That section 26 of Article V., which reads as follows: "Section 26. All laws relating to courts shall be general and of uniform operation, and the organization, jurisdiction, and powers of all courts of the same class or grade, so far as regulated by law, and the force and effect of the process and judgments of such courts, shall be uniform; and the General Assembly is hereby prohibited from creating other courts to exercise the powers vested by this Constitution in the judges of the Courts of Common Pleas and Orphans' Courts," be amended so that the same shall read as follows:—

Section 26. All laws relating to courts shall be general and of uniform operation, and the organization, jurisdiction, and powers of all courts of the same class or grade, so far as regulated by law, and the force and effect of the process and judgments of such courts, shall be uniform; but, notwithstanding any provisions of this Constitution, the General Assembly shall have full power to establish new courts from time to time, as the same may be needed in any city or county, and to prescribe the powers and jurisdiction thereof, and to increase the number of judges in any courts now existing or hereafter created, or to reorganize the same, or to vest in other courts the jurisdiction theretofore exercised by courts not of record, and to abolish the same wherever it may be deemed necessary for the orderly and efficient administration of justice.

ROBERT McAFEE,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Number Two.

RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, so as to eliminate the requirement of payment of taxes as a qualification of the right to vote.

Resolved (if the House of Representatives concur), That the following amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:

That section one of article eight be amended, by striking out the fourth numbered paragraph thereof, so that the said section shall read as follows:

Section 1. Every male citizen twenty-one years of age, possessing the following qualifications, shall be entitled to vote at all elections, subject however to such laws requiring and regulating the registration of electors as the General Assembly may enact.

First. He shall have been a citizen of the United States at least one month.

Second. He shall have resided in the State one year (or if, having previously been a qualified elector or native-born citizen of the State, he shall have removed therefrom and returned, then six months), immediately preceding the election.

Third. He shall have resided in the election district where he shall offer to vote at least two months immediately preceding the election.

ROBERT McAFEE,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Number Three.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, so as to consolidate the courts of common pleas of Allegheny County.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following amendment to the Constitution of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:—

That section six of article five be amended, by striking out the said section, and inserting in place thereof the following:

Section 6. In the county of Philadelphia all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the district courts and courts of common pleas, subject to such changes as may be made by this Constitution or by law, shall be in Philadelphia vested in five distinct and separate courts of equal and co-ordinate jurisdiction, composed of three judges each. The said courts in Philadelphia shall be designated respectively as the court of common pleas number one, number two, number three, number four, and number five, but the number of said courts may be by law increased, from time to time, and shall be in like manner designated by successive numbers. The number of judges in any of said courts, or in any county where the establishment of an additional court may be authorized by law, may be increased, from time to time, and whenever such increase shall amount in the whole to three, such three judges shall compose a distinct and separate court as aforesaid, which shall be numbered as aforesaid. In Philadelphia all suits shall be instituted in the said courts of common pleas without designating the number of the said court, and the several courts shall distribute and apportion the business among them in such manner as shall be provided by rules of court, and each court to which any suit shall be thus assigned, shall have exclusive jurisdiction thereof, subject to change of venue, as shall be provided by law.

In the county of Allegheny all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the several numbered courts of common pleas shall be vested in one court of common pleas, composed of all the judges in commission in said courts. Such jurisdiction and powers shall extend to all proceedings at law and in equity which shall have been instituted in the several numbered courts, and shall be subject to such changes as may be made by law, and subject to change of venue as provided by law. The president judge of said court shall be selected as provided by law. The number of judges in said court may be by law increased from time to time. This amendment shall take effect on the first day of January succeeding its adoption.

A true copy of Resolution No. 3.

ROBERT McAFEE,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Number Four.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to section eight, article nine, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in accordance with the provisions of the eighteenth article thereof:—

Amendment to Article Nine, Section Eight.

Section 1. Amend section eight, article nine, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, which reads as follows:—

"Section 8. The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the assent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law; but any city, the debt of which now exceeds seven per centum of such assessed valuation, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum, in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation," so as to read as follows:—

Section 8. The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the assent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law; but any city, the debt of which now exceeds seven per centum of such assessed valuation, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum, in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation, except that any debt or debts hereinafter incurred by the city and county of Philadelphia for the construction and development of subways for transit purposes, or for the construction of wharves and docks, or the reclamation of land to be used in the construction of a system of wharves and docks, as public improvements, owned or to be owned by said city and county of Philadelphia, and which shall yield to the city and county of Philadelphia current net revenue in excess of the interest on said debt or debts and of the annual installments necessary for the cancellation of said debt or debts, may be excluded in ascertaining the power of the city and county of Philadelphia to become otherwise indebted: Provided, That a sinking fund for their cancellation shall be established and maintained.

Apples.

The apple is a fruit that grows upon a tree.

Because of this fact the tree is called an apple tree.

The problem of whether or not it would be an apple tree if it did not bear apples is one that has racked the brains of some of our deepest thinkers.

At first blush, one would say it would not be an apple tree under these circumstances.

However, we know that all the maple sirup does not come from the maple tree.

Apples used to be very nice and good. They tempted Adam and Eve to break their lease just before the first fall.

Yet apples then were not as apples nowadays. Nowadays apples, like eggs, are not considered fit for the market until they have been kept in cold storage for at least one year.

If Adam and Eve had been tempted with a cold-storage apple their mail would still have reached them at No. 1, Eden.

No, Constant Reader, the Appalachian Mountains were not so named because of the apple orchards that blanket their sides.—Chicago Post.

Patch Instead of Darn.

A device which will be found useful is the substitution of a patch instead of darning a much-worn stocking, especially when the heel is worn thread bare by the rubbing of low shoes.

An easy way to do this is to cut a piece from an old stocking, as near the same texture as the one to be mended as possible.

Harris Hoy, the Marshall Field of Clarence, spent Sunday with Bellefonte friends.

George Harpster and Boyd Stiver are representing Worth township in court, both serving as jurors.

Miss Eva Crissman has resumed her dancing class, having a nice attendance on Friday evening, last.

Miles township has one representative on the grand jury, William H. Conser, and also one serving as a traverse juror, the latter being A. L. Swarm; both good men.

The L. C. L. club were delightfully entertained on Thursday evening, last, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Mallalieu, on Howard Street.

Joshua R. Pheasant that very genial and popular resident of Mt. Eagle, and also "The Republican" correspondent at that place, is in town this week, serving as a grand juror.

J. H. Goss and G. W. Walk, both of Taylor township, are among the jurors in court this week. Mr. Goss being on the grand jury and Mr. Walk serving as a traverse juror.

Centre Hall is ably represented at this session of court. Rev. Daniel Gress and William Boozer are serving on the grand jury, while L. W. Walker, a carpenter, is a traverse juror.

Sigmund Joseph and Harry Holtz returned home on Friday, last, after a visit to Philadelphia and New York, where they made selections of the latest in everything for the Joseph Brothers & Company store.

Miss Ethel Dale last week departed for Baltimore, where she has entered the Woman's College. She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Clement Dale, who spent several days in Philadelphia before returning home.

Cards have been received announcing the wedding, on Wednesday, September, 21, at Pittsburg, of Miss Annie Nenette, of Johnstown, and Charles Garfield Bracken, also of that place. The bride at one time resided at Flemington.

Howard township does not happen to be represented on the grand jury this week, but four good men from that section of the county are serving as traverse jurors. They are Ward Thompson, Lionel Shay, W. F. Leathers and J. Linn Pletcher.

William M. Allison, of Spring Mills, was summoned as a grand juror for the present term of court, but owing to the recent death of his head miller he found it especially inconvenient to be away this week. He was in Bellefonte on Monday and when the facts were explained to the court he was at once excused.

When you come to town next week for the big Centre County fair, it will be a good time to call at "The Republican" office and adjust your subscription account. If it so happens that you are not a subscriber, it will be a good time to call and have us enter your name on our list. $1 a year in advance.

A nice little check received a day or two ago conveyed the necessary instructions to continue sending "The Republican" for another year to Mr. and Mrs. Albert D. Riley, who now are located at Plainfield, N. J. Mrs. Riley will be remembered by her host of friends here as formerly Miss Lucetta Brew.

Edward Harper is not only a regular reader of "The Republican" but he is rapidly becoming the John Wanamaker of Curtin's Works, his store at that place becoming bigger and better each year. Ed. is taking in so much money these days that he concluded to distribute a little of it, so he very kindly sent some this way, advancing his subscrip- another year.

David Henderson, who resides two and one-half miles west of Julian, and who is a regular reader of "The Republican", was a genial caller at our office on Monday. Mr. Henderson advertises in another column a 140-acre farm for sale. Persons desiring an eapecially good farm will do well to call on or communicate with Mr. Henderson.

Rush township is open for congratulations on the fine looking delegation of jurors in attendance at court. Fred Eisenhauer, the proprietor of the Cassanova hotel; James A. Bilger, Martin Copelin and L. A. Sharrer are doing duty as traverse jurors and Amos Garland is participating in the councils of the grand jury.

Four Gregg township citizens are grand jurors, making all told eight jurors from the one township, which is a pretty strong representation for almost any kind of occasion. The four grand jurors are W. B. Bitner, Horace Hering, L. C. Miller and Ammon F. Vonada. David Bartges, C. E. Hackenberg, J. M. Heckman and H. P. Rossman are the traverse jurors.

William R. Cooke, a former Bellefonte boy and known to all of us as "Billy." sent us a neat little check this week with instructions to continue mailing him "The Republican" for another year. "Billy." is located in Philadelphia and is "making good" in the business world. He is manager of the Philadelphia branch of the big firm of Lamont, Corliss & Company, who as exporters and importers do a world-wide business and rank as one of the leading institutions in the country.

Try "Rexall Cherry Bark" for that cough—You can get it at Greens.

Fred Blanchard, who is located in Chicago, was an arrival in town on Saturday evening.

John Shultz, of Milesburg, is one of the men who are doing jury duty in court this week.

Councilman Oscar Yerger and son, Norris, are this week taking in the sights at Niagara Falls.

Miss M. Snyder will display the correct models in hats and toques, also the Phipps hats, Oct. 7.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brown and two children, of New York, are visiting at the Howard Spangler home.

A. J. Shipley, of Unionville, one of "The Republican's" valued subscribers, was a shopping visitor to Bellefonte on Saturday.

William Hartsock, of Waddle, and Gray Hartsock, of Altoona, were pleasant over-Sunday visitors at the George Waite home.

Harry Whitton, who farms the Jake Sanford farm, near Kylertown, reports having raised three hundred bushels of buck wheat on three acres of land.

A. M. Lane, of Washington, D. C., has been chosen vice president of the Philipsburg and Susquehanna Valley railroad, succeeding G. W. Martin, resigned.

Mrs. Mary S. Burchfield, of Buffalo, N. Y., who has many friends in Bellefonte, is visiting her son and daughter, W. L. Burchfield and Mrs. J. Albert Wilson, at Philipsburg.

Miss Mary Ray on Friday evening, last, entertained in honor of Misses Mary Hicklin and Alice Lowrey, who this week were enrolled as students at the Maryland College for Women, at Lutherville, Maryland.

Misses Kate and Lizzie McGowan recently visited friends in Buffalo and Rochester, N. Y. The former has returned home, but her sister remained at Rochester, where she has accepted a very lucrative position.

Mrs. Ross A. Hickok and children, who have been spending the summer at the Hastings home, will return to Harrisburg on Saturday. On Monday Miss Sarah Hastings will resume her studies at Briar-Cliff-on-the-Hudson.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson I. Fleming returned home on Friday, last, after a delightful visit of several weeks with their son, Ward, and his wife and baby, at Harrisburg. Ward is an instructor in the Harrisburg schools and is meeting with gratifying success.

Archie Condo, who for some time past has been a student at the Bellefonte Academy and who during the summer played on the Bellefonte baseball club, this week entered Swarthmore college. Archie is a Howard boy, and a good one, too.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Hoffman recently returned to their home, at Lockport, N. Y., after a most enjoyable visit with Bellefonte friends. Before their departure they very thoughtfully advanced the date on their copy of "The Republican" another year.

We wish to call your attention to the advertisement on another page of Claster's Underselling Store. In the announcement of their grand opening, on Saturday, October 1, this popular store offers to the public a rare opportunity to make purchases not to be duplicated in this section of the State.

We wish to express our thanks to C. E. Blake, of Port Matilda, for the welcome enclosure in a letter a few days ago instructing us to advance the date on the label of his copy of "The Republican." Mr. Blake makes a specialty of growing seeding potatoes and the fact that they are in demand is sufficient evidence that he thoroughly understands his business.

Mrs. R. T. Powell, of Fort Smith, Arkansas, this week visited Bellefonte friends. Mrs. Powell will be recalled as formerly Miss Carrie Lingle, of Philipsburg. Before returning to her home in the west she will visit with her brother, Chester, at Graceton. While in Philipsburg Mrs. Powell had a most pleasing experience, being presented with an old Grandfather's clock, which had been in the Lingle family for many years.

Curt Taylor, the popular young passenger brakeman on the Central Railroad usually reads "The Republican" after the mail carrier has left his copy at the house. Last week, however, he dropped into the office in time to see the type being arranged in the forms and he was able to read some of the headings of first page articles. Most persons unfamiliar with type are unable to read it, but Curt was one time a carrier for the old "Daily News," and the smattering of printing which he then picked up has never left him, which explains his ability to read some of the type as it lay on the stones.

One of the most genial persons attending court this week is Isaac R. Williams, of Howard, who is serving as a grand juror. Mr. Williams is a subscriber to "The Republican" and on Monday honored us with a little call. If he is as pleasant and entertaining in the grand jury room as when he visited "The Republican" office it would be worth while to be summoned before that august body just for the opportunity of having a little chat with Mr. Williams. However, we suspect that when it comes down to administering the law Mr. Williams is the kind of man who looks neither to the right nor to the left, so with his permission we will have him do all his entertaining, so far as we are concerned, right here at "The Republican" office.

Mrs. Ida Long, of Altoona, is visiting Bellefonte friends. Mrs. Long will be recalled as formerly Miss Ida Roan.

Steward Fleck this week moved his household goods to Niagara Falls, to which place he will go on Monday.

W. M. Stover, the well known and efficient carpenter, is representing Haines township as a traverse juror this week.

Joseph Brothers & Company's big millinery opening,—Friday and Saturday, September 30 and October 1. Don't miss it.

George Kauffman and daughter, of Altoona, were pleasant guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Love over Sunday.

S. D. Replogle, of Roslyn, N. Y., this week visited Sheriff and Mrs. W. E. Hurley. Mr. Replogle is a brother of Mrs. Hurley and is postmaster at Roslyn.

Now that your eye has fallen on this paragraph in "The Republican", stop and examine the ad of Leathers Bros. See if you don't find it well worth thinking about.

D. C. Garner and H. A. Pletcher, both from Liberty township, are in attendance at court, the former serving as a grand juror. Mr. Garner is a traverse juror.

Farmer H. G. Martin is Patton township's sole representative as a juror this week, but he is doing good work and making a good showing for his section of the county.

The only juror from Huston township for the first week of court is D. J. Gingery and if there is a handsomer man serving in that capacity we haven't been able to discover it.

J. M. Bunnell, of Johnstown, Pa., will exhibit at the Bellefonte Fair high grade pianos and autotones. Any one desiring a bargain in a first-class piano, don't fail to visit the booth.

Joseph Brothers & Company announce their grand millinery opening, on Friday and Saturday, September 30 and October 1. See their ad in this issue of "The Republican."

Philipsburg usually turns up with quite a few jurors at every session of court, but this week there are but two jurymen from that pretty town across the mountains. They are Hamer Sankey and Herman Meyer.

The venerable John A. Daley, of Romola, is a grand juror for the present term of court, and now that we come to think of it, he is the only Curtin township man doing jury duty this week.

Clyde Krebs, of State College, is spending the week in town. Mr. Krebs is attending the several sessions of court as a juror and between times transacting some private business demanding his attention.

C. B. Hess, the merchant; Samuel Harpster and Harry Koch both farmers, and William H. Roush comprise the contingent from Ferguson township in town this week and doing service at the Court House as jurors.

Clayton Royer, the Benner township farmer, is spending the week in town, doing jury duty at the Court House, greeting old friends and also attending to some business matters which he happened to have on hand.

Quite a few Bellefonte citizens are doing duty as jurors this week. Thomas Beaver, J. Linn Graham and John I. Olewine are grand jurors, and Hard P. Harris, Harold Kirk and A. F. Showers are traverse jurors.

It was our pleasure a day or two ago to enroll as a subscriber to "The Republican" J. H. Bowman, who resides near Spring Mills. Mr. Bowman wanted a good Centre County newspaper and naturally concluded to try "The Republican."

From Spring township there are six men in attendance at court and doing jury duty this week. Albert Smeltzer is a grand juror, while traverse jurors from the township are Charles Heisler, James Kellerman, Peter Kane, William Woods and William Wells.

Just as if one undertaker were not enough, it turned out that two were drawn for jury service at this term of court. Bellefonte contributed one and Millheim the other, the latter being S. M. Campbell. S. Ward Gramley is also a Millheim juror.

Leo Cherry, who is working in Charleroi, the home town of John K. Tener, Republican nominee for Governor, is visiting at the home of his parents at this place. Leo works in the office of a Charleroi newspaper, of which Mr. Tener is part owner.

James Davis, a son of J. Mc C. Davis, proprietor of the Garman House, became quite ill on Sunday at the Susquehanna University and was sent to his home here. His father met him at Tyrone and accompanied him to Bellefonte. Mr. Davis said yesterday that his son was getting along very nicely and that he would be about again in a few days.

The Bellefonte Central passenger train was on time on Tuesday. Fact of the matter is, it was several minutes ahead of time. Conductor Ross Parker didn't wait very long at the station, once the train was in, but took a short cut for his home. A brand, new baby boy had made his appearance at the Parker home that day and ever since Ross has been singing: "There's one more conductor on the payroll."

June 16th, 1909.

Mr. E. F. Cook, Ft. Dodge, Ia.

Dear Sir:--I am in receipt of yours of June 10, enclosing me options on my policy No. 1936. I thank you very kindly for the same. I am more than pleased with the results of my policy, as it is fully 4 per cent. better than any other policy I have ever matured. At the time I took out this policy, I was carrying a 20 year policy in an Eastern Company. I had carried it for three years, and taking into consideration the amount of money necessary to carry my policy for 17 years longer in this Eastern Company, I found that I could take a policy that would mature 15 years from the Royal Union Mutual Life Insurance Company and that they would pay us more money at the expiration of 15 years than my Eastern Company would have paid me if I had continued to carry it 17 years. Therefore, I discontinued the Eastern policy and have not only gained two years in time of maturity, but the results have been much better than if I had carried my Eastern policy for the 17 years.

Thanking you, I remain,

Yours truly,

Signed C. N. HOPKINS.
